INVESTMENT SCRUTINY SET

OTTAWA (CP) — Government screening of new investment by foreign-owned business will begin Oct. 15, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said today.

On that date the second part of the Foreign Investment Review Act will go into effect, following by more than a year proclamation of the first part of the act, which covers takeovers of existing businesses.

Some provincial governments, particularly Ontario, have argued long and forcefully against proclamation of the second part of the act, arguing that it might harm slow-growth regions.

"I want to assure honorable members," Gillespie said in making the announcement in the Commons, "that there will be no unnecessary delay in investment programs important to the development of designated regions of the country through duplication of administrative procedures."

"I should like to emphasize . . . that the purpose of the Foreign Investment Review Act is not to block foreign investment from any source or to discourage it, but rather to ensure that such investment is of significant benefit to Canada."

The guides, released today, cover new investment or expansion by foreign firms or foreign-owned companies here.

Companies will not come under the scrutiny of the Foreign Investment Review Agency if their business grows.

The agency will only be examining expansion into unrelated fields. An example an agency official gave at a briefing today would be if General Motors of Canada Ltd. wanted to go into the hotel business.

2,300 Seeking 22 Jobs

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

There are over 2,300 Victoria young people seeking 22 jobs at student Canada Manpower — and office director Pat Torrison has launched a campaign to do something about the job shortage.

A flyer will be distributed to 5,000 Victoria households urging residents to hire students for odd jobs.

"We are looking for any kind of suitable jobs ranging from housepainting to cutting grass and cleaning attics. We have 100 students per day coming into the office asking for any kind of work. We want them to get some spending money in their pocket and the sense of self respect that comes with having a job — even if just for a day or two."

She said the job shortage is a dramatic reversal from last year when there were as many jobs as there were students seeking them.

"Most of the young people who come in are really eager and it is heartbreaking to see them come in day after day only to discover there are no jobs available."

One girl was so determined to find work she accepted a babysitting job on Galiano Island.

The flyers will be distributed in the Greater Victoria area by Torrison, 25, and her staff of five, all University of Victoria students, who are employed at the student Canada Manpower office at 824 Johnson Street. They are looking for volunteers to help them distribute the flyers.

The staff will also distribute flyers at shopping centres and will clean up the litter if the flyers are discarded.

Of the 22 jobs on the board, eight are sales positions, including door-to-door work. Although the tourist season is in full swing, only three waitress jobs are posted.

The list of baby-sitting positions has fallen to one, and that's in Sooke.

The student Manpower office had a peak of 3,000 young people on the list and found jobs for 700. However, the supply of jobs appears to have dried up and the only hope for students seems to be if householders respond, Torrison said.

Many of the young people are counting on summer income to pay for their studies this fall.

"She was very keen, but we suggested she be satisfied with working for her parents or for a neighbor until she is a little older."

The oldest student is a woman about 30.

One of the suggestions the young people get is to make business cards giving their name, address and phone number and outlining the type of work they are looking for. These cards could then be distributed to neighbors.

U.K. Inflation Soars to 26.1%

LONDON (AP) — Britain's rate of inflation soared to a record 26.1 per cent in the 12 months ending in June, the government announced today.

It was the fourth month in succession that a new high was reached and confirms Britain's ranking as the country with the worst inflation in Europe.

The latest figures come only a week after Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government announced plans to get inflation down to 10 per cent in a year's time by limiting weekly wage increases to £6.

The department of employment said the annual rate of inflation increased from the 25 per cent reported in May because of a 1.9-per-cent increase in prices in June. A large part of that increase was due to the cost of fresh foods, particularly potatoes, which until this month were selling at more than 30 cents a pound.

Government officials said inflation is expected to continue rising slowly for some months to come, reflecting recent wage settlements of 30 per cent and more in British industry.

But they expect the pay ceiling, effective Aug. 1, to begin to bite into the cost of living figures by the end of the year.

Among other industrial countries, figures for the 12 months ending in May indicate the United States had an inflation rate of 9.5 per cent, Japan 14.1 per cent, France 12.1 per cent, West Germany 6.1 per cent, Italy 19.7 per cent and Belgium 13.7 per cent.

Blockade May Be Legal

The Indian blockade of the road between Gold River and Muchalat Inlet appears to be situated on land legally owned by the Indians and therefore not illegal.

"Land registry office records indicate that the land is theirs but we don't know all the negotiations that may have gone on," Deputy Attorney-General David Vickers said today.

Until ownership of the 1.91 acre site on which the Indian barricade is situated is definitely ascertained, government action to end the five-day blockade is uncertain.

Indians have maintained that the road, which runs from the town of Gold River through reserve land to the Tahsis Co. pulp mill and the wharves on Muchalat Inlet, is on Indian land for which compensation was never paid.

Gold River RCMP said a second Indian blockade was set up early this morning on a gravel road leading to the pulp mill, but this blockade came down about 8:20 a.m.

At Mount Currie near Pemberton, the Mount Currie Indian band council was to meet this morning to discuss a noon deadline they were given to remove their month-long blockade of the Lillooet Lake Road.

Bill Wilson, one of three executive members of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, was to arrive at Mount Currie this morning to attend the meeting.

At a band meeting Thursday evening, RCMP Cpl. G. W. Gibbs told the Mount Currie Indians the blockade must come down today, and asked them to decide this morning whether they would remove it themselves.

Band member Verna Stager said Gibbs was asked whether he intended to send in the riot squad if the blockade remained.

"He just said he's hopeful that the Indians will agree to bring it down themselves," she said. "If not, he'll bring in the necessary equpment."

Gibbs said today he's aware there is a militant group among the band members who would like to maintain the blockade, but he's hopeful the band council will act responsibly.

"If they're ever going to display leadership I think now's the time," he said.

Vickers announced Thursday he had written Mount Currie chief Allan Stager saying the blockade must come down immediately.

At the same time he announced that Indians at the Gold River blockade were told negotiations on Indian grievances can take place only after the barricade is removed.

Three senior provincial officials, led by deputy highways Minister Howard Sturrock, went to Gold River Thursday afternoon to talk to the Indians at the blockade.

The Indians bluntly refused to negotiate until Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs executive members were present, so the officials left in frustration.

UBCIC executive member Philip Paul said he intends to go to Gold River today to find out exactly what the protesters' grievances are.

UBCIC Thursday passed a resolution of support for the Mount Currie band and condemned the ultimatum issued by the attorney-general.

TRUMPET VOLUNTEER was a blowhard, but he got more wind in his cheeks than he did in the trumpet. Tom Drake, holding the instrument, was ready with instructions to help Chris Palmer learn to make more sound with less effort. Drake is one of seven members of a high school band spending the summer teaching London, Ont., children about musical instruments.

Fears in Canada

OTTAWA (FP) — Canada is facing a new increased round of inflation in 1976 according to economists who have examined the outlook in the context of the latest budget, Conservative leader Robert Stanfield told the Commons Thursday.

Finance Minister John Turner agreed that this was a major concern confronting the finance department and the government generally.

"It depends very much on food prices and on the effect that wage and cost of production increases may have on the price structure of the country," said Turner.

Opposition finance critic Sinclair Stevens asked if it is the intention of Turner to continue in the post of finance minister and face up to the result of his economic policies next year.

Turner did not answer.

Stanfield recalled that in May the finance minister had urged Canadians to face up to the fact that "time is running out," in the current economic crisis.

And now that Canadians are facing the prospect of further severe inflation in 1976 Stanfield asked Turner to tell Parliament what he proposed to adopt as additional policy to encourage further restraint.

He asked if Turner intends to make any further efforts to achieve voluntary agreement on restraint.

Turner pointed out that he had told the press on budget night that he would wait to assess the reaction to the budget by the leaders of the various sectors of the economy.

Metchosin Gets Assurance

More Mills Shut Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — More mill shutdowns were reported Thursday as B.C.'s huge forestry industry began feeling the spreading effects of a strike by nearly 12,000 pulp workers.

The pulp workers, members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the Canadian Paperworkers' Union, went on strike Wednesday at all 20 pulp mills in the province.

Canadian Cellulose, owned 79 per cent by the government, was reported shutting down its sawmill and logging operations at Terrace. That would affect 800 IWA members.

Canadian Forest Products announced it will close its Eburne sawmill in the Fraser Valley, affecting 585 IWA members, and other mills are expected to follow as wood chips destined for the idle pulp mills pile up.

Although the provincial government has bought and is buying land for housing in the Metchosin area, the purchases don't extend into the true rural heartland.

A senior official of Dunhill Development Corporation, the provincial housing development agency, gave that assurance to a Colwood public meeting Thursday night, in an obvious attempt to dispel recent rumors of planned urban intrusion into Metchosin.

Speculation was that the government's land banking program would stretch from the vicinity of Latoria Road as far south as the William Head prison, gobbling up much of Metchosin's agricultural land and spoiling its rural charm.

The fears, voiced earlier this week at a meeting of the Metchosin Ratepayers' Association, were aired again Thursday night when some 200 residents of the so-called Western Community attended a meeting sponsored by the Capital Regional District to discuss the preparation of a community plan for Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

But David O'Brien, vice-president of Dunhill responsible for land acquisition, stood up late in the meeting to identify himself and dismiss the rumors.

"We haven't purchased any land outside the urban containment area as proposed in the official Regional Plan last year," he said, and there was no intention to do so.

"I am sorry for those of you who thought we might be knocking on your doors with vast offers," he added.

The southerly limit of the plan's suggested containment area follows the general line of the electoral boundary separating Colwood, Langford and Metchosin. It runs along Briarwood Lane, less than a mile south of Latoria.

However, the meeting was told by regional planning officials that when a community plan is prepared to complement the regional plan, the containment area will probably be adjusted in keeping with physical features — especially watershed drainage — rather than political demarcation.

In an interview after the meeting, O'Brien said he was unable to indicate the extent of the land purchases to date in the Latoria-Briarwood area, or the planned eventual total.

But another source in the provincial housing department said more than 200 acres has already been bought or is under option, and that represents only a portion of the land banking program for Metchosin.

O'Brien noted that a key element in planning for housing is a trunk sewer system, and studies on this will have to be undertaken in conjunction with the regional district.

He said he envisaged the development would be a mixture of housing styles, including some co-operative housing and rental accommodation, with a "broad range of incomes involved."

On a more general note, regional planner Peter Hammer told residents the purpose of the meeting was mainly to outline broad concepts of the regional plan adopted last year, and to suggest ways in which these could be refined and detailed in a community plan for Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

He asked them to present their ideas and briefs at a workshop which opens at Belmont Fisher High school next Monday, running weekdays though July and August from 1 to 9 p.m.

The plan assumes the population of the three communities will triple from its

Shuttle Diplomacy In Space

HOUSTON (AP) — In a spirit of good-humored camaraderie, Apollo astronauts and Soyuz cosmonauts executed their own brand of shuttle diplomacy today in a series of visits between their linked orbital homes.

There was much back-slapping and hand-shaking as spacemen moved through a tunnel connecting the two ships.

Hosts took visitors on television tours of the respective craft, family pictures were proudly displayed and meals shared.

Cosmonaut Valeri Kubasov pointed a television camera out the window over the Soviet Union as he gave visiting Vance Brand a high-altitude travelogue of his homeland, a vast stretch from the Black Sea to the Pacific.

As the spacemen continued their unprecedented space journey, Soyuz commander Alexei Leonov and Brand made early-morning transfers to the other's craft.

It was the first of three transfers on this final day of linkup on the first international space mission.

The five spacemen also arranged a farewell ceremony and a televised news conference later today, to answer questions submitted by reporters in Houston and Moscow.

Leonov was the first of the Soviet crew to visit Apollo. U.S. astronauts Thomas Stafford and Donald Slayton visited the Soyuz for nearly three hours Thursday after the docking of the two ships 140 miles high.

The cosmonauts, hosts for the first cosmic dinner, provided traditional borscht soup, jellied turkey, tiny loaves of Russian bread and other space treats for the Americans.

Laws for Modern Times, Modern Crimes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — More protection in the courts for victims of rape, roadside screening tests for drinking drivers, tighter bail laws and provisions for dealing with "syndicates" and international criminals, were incorporated in a law and order package announced Thursday.

The 102 criminal law amendments proposed by Justice Minister Otto Lang reflect, more or less, modern times and modern crimes.

Rape victims no longer would be subject to sudden cross-examination about their past, and they would get other protections against court room treatment that has often made them look, and feel, like an accused person than a plaintiff.

Lang said these moves would increase the number of rapes that are reported and prosecuted.

"Our attitudes toward the offence of rape are changing and the amendments provide protection to the complainant while keeping in mind the rights of the accused," Lang said.

Under present law a rape trial judge is required to warn the jury of the danger of convicting the accused if the complainant's testimony is not corroberated.

Appeal courts no longer would be able to reverse jury acquitals, as they did in the case of Dr. Morgentaler, reversing the jury verdict and sending the Montreal abortionist to prison for 18 months.

The bill's area of broadest public impact is a series of breath-test provisions that would enable police to require a person who leaves a bar and gets into a car to blow into the balloon.

The bill was given first reading in the Commons Thursday and will come up for second reading during the fall session which begins Oct. 14.

It is unlikely to become law before the late winter or spring after lively committee study and debate.

It may play second fiddle to the omnibus public safety bill Lang and Solicitor-General Warren Allmand are working on.

This bill will contain amendments to the law on capital punishment, gun controls, parole and related matters.

Trio to Push Berger's Reforms

The provincial government has appointed a three-man commission to implement Berger Commission recommendations on family courts and juvenile delinquency.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said provincial court judge Harold Keenleyside of Vancouver will head the commission. Other members will be Mish Vadasz and Allison Brunet.

It is hoped the committee will be able to devise a system to balance the concepts of totally segregating juvenile offenders from society or allowing almost total permissiveness, said Macdonald.

If the court facilities are designed to solve juvenile problems rather than to punish offenders, youngsters likely would be more receptive to the judicial system, he said.

The province's 45 justice councils will help initiate the program which will be implemented in stages, he added.

Berger's 66 recommendations ranged from a tighter rein on hard-core juvenile delinquents to an integrated court system that could deal pressing needs" in the fields of

Macdonald said the commission would work closely with departments of health, education, and human resources.

The commission will attempt to relieve the "very pressing needs" in the fields of family court and juvenile delinquents.

In the current system, Macdonald said, children have to be raised and dealt with in adult court or made wards of the superintendent of child welfare.

The commission will launch a "major assault" on the problems, he said.

He referred to the Keenleyside commission as an "implementation team to attempt to solve the problems of the "abismal facilities in many areas of the province."

New assessment facilities would offer a facility for a youngster to "cool out" and allow workers to be accepted. He indicated few custodial centres are planned.

Although Keenleyside declined to specify his first target, he said changes would be phased in.

"The commission will carry out its job with as much expedition as we can muster, but there's no deadline."

Keenleyside said the commissioners are well aware of the needs of the courts for dealing with the problem.

A major Berger commission proposal was the phasing in of a unified family court system to provide short-term crisis counselling to people before the courts, juvenile or family, and a professional advisory service to judges to help them make "meaningful dispositions."

PERON SEEKS TIME OFF

Times News Services

BUENOS AIRES — President Isabel Peron is considering asking the Argentine Congress to grant her a 60-day leave of absence beause of illness, well-informed sources said today.

There was no official confirmation of the report, and congressional sources said Thursday night that such a request has not been submitted.

Peron, 44, was bedridden for the third day in the presidential residence at Los Olivos with a serious cold, a medical bulletin said.

Doctors said she does not have a fever and "is improving rapidly."

But sources said the doctors have advised the president to take a rest, preferably outside Argentina, which is in the midst of winter.

Peron's illness has prevented her from dealing with a host of economic and political problems besetting the country.

The government has placed Argentina's rate of inflation at more than 110 per cent. The influential business magazine Mercado has predicted a figure of 200 per cent by year's end, calling the figure "optimistic."

A two-day general strike last week to protest a government economic austerity package ended when Peron backed off from a tough proposal to limit salary hikes and allowed wage increases of as much as 160 per cent.

She accepted resignations from nearly half her top cabinet ministers during the crisis, but has reconfirmed Economy Minister Celestino Rodrigo, author of the austerity plan and target of bitter criticism from the labor movement.

RODENT IN COKE

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A Portland man who claims that a dead rodent in a Coca-Cola bottle made him violently ill filed a $634,600 suit Thursday against the Pacific Coca-Cola Bottling Co.

Robert Collins said he purchased a quart bottle of Coca-Cola May 9 and became severely ill after drinking some of it.

"He said the beverage was unwholesome, poisonous and unfit for human consumption in that it contained a deceased and contaminated rodent," the complaint said.

White House Team Works On Gas-Crisis Answers

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A U.S. government task force is drawing up a plan for President Ford to cope with natural gas shortages which officials said Thursday could be seriously worsened by reduced Canadian exports.

The task force, headed by the energy resources council, a White House agency, plans to report to Ford by Sept. 1.

The report will recommend measures to increase U.S. supplies of gas or alternative fuels, to conserve and reduce consumption and to ease the impact of shortages on the areas most affected.

The federal government in Ottawa announced Wednesday that exports would have to be reduced, but delayed a decision on the amount of the reduction.

"Although the Canadian announcement stated that every effort would be made to avoid curtailment of export deliveries over the coming heating season, any curtailment by Canada would add to the U.S. shortage," said spokesman for the U.S. Federal Eenrgy Administration.

Ottawa's announcement specifically warned that such efforts would exclude curtailments "which continue to concur in the Pacific northwest"—that is, gas exported from B.C.

The FEA expressed "serious concern" about the Canadian announcement.

The state department also described the situation as "serious."

introducing a minimum sentence of two weeks in jail for second offenders and three months for subsequent offenders.

More than 100,000 Canadians have been convicted at least once under the breath test since 1969.

Under the present law, a policeman must have reasonable grounds to believe a driver is impaired when he requires a breath test.

The proposed law would require only a reasonable belief that the driver had been drinking.

That means police would be able to monitor bars and taverns at night, getting to drivers before they leave the parking lot.

If the driver refused to take the test, he would be subject to the same penalty that would apply if he failed it.

The police also would be able to make roadside checks, setting up a breath-test van and testing any driver they believed had been drinking. A transport department survey last year found that at night, one driver in 12 was impaired and about one-quarter of the 7,000 stopped-charges weren't recorded in the survey — had been drinking.

Lang said the breath test had some impact for a year or two after its introduction but this "seemed to disappear" and tougher measures are needed.

The object isn't to get more convictions but to make "the dangers of conviction much more clear," even to casual drinkers.

Judges no longer would have the power to suspend licences on conviction.

But judges would be able to grant a conditional discharge — meaning no record, fine or jail term — providing the driver needed and was willing to take treatment for alcoholism.

It would be a crime "knowlingly to possess in Canada anything obtained by crime in Canada or elsewhere."

Lang said police often can demonstrate that funds used by a peroson or company in Canada are "the direct proceeds of securities stolen in the United States and 'laundered' or passed through various companies that are a front for organized crime."

It also would be an offence to "comspire in Canada to commit an offence out of Canada" or vice-versa.

The manufacture or use of "black boxes" to get around long distance tolls also is being outlawed and credit card fraud, and organized crime in many cities, is being treated more seriously.

Begging was removed from the Criminal Code as a crime in 1972.

But pinball, outlawed in the 1940's as a pratice that corrupted youth, will become legal again "to relfect the changes in public attitudes."

In a related development, amendments dealing with the death penalty in Canada could be brought into the Commons later, Lang told reporters.

He declined to give any forecast as to when the capital punishment issue would be dealt with in the Commons.

However, outside the House other members of the cabinet have pointed out that the present legislation providing for the death penalty for murderers of prison guards and policemen expires in 1977.

present figure of about 20,000 to 60,000 by 1996, and one resident wanted to know how the area could absorb this expansion "when we can't cope with the road and drainage problems we have now."

"You should have asked us if we wanted all these people out here," he added.

In many cases present residents established there because they wanted to enjoy the peace and quiet of country living and planners shouldn't assume that everyone wanted swimming pools and other urban amenities.

Hammer replied that growth management is a fundamental issue, and realistic planning has to porceed on the assumption that there will be population growth, whether that is desirable or not.

Accepting the fact that agricultural land on the Saanich Peninusla must be preserved, and that only Saanich of the core municipalities offers real scope for coping with population increases, the Western Community was the logical choice for expansion.

Several people attending the meeting were skeptical about the value of the planning exercise, and said the past record of the Capital Regional District in Colwood and Langford didn't give much cause for optimism.

John Waterman, president of the Metchosin Ratepayers Association, said if the panning mis-mash of Colwood Corners and commercial developmmt along Goldstream were examples of what could be expected for the future, "I suggest you leave the job to the amateurs."

Regional director Earl Pallister said the present zoning bylaws were drawn up by the provincial government long before regional districts were established.

The regional board had asked repeatedly over the past 18 months to be given responsiblity for subdivision approval, "but they (the government) haven't seen fit to give it to us."

Billion Dollar Boom Eyed for Planemen

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is hearing or considering proposals for two new aircraft that U.S. suppliers say can result in hundreds of millions—perhaps billions—of dollars for the Canadian aerospace industry.

Proposals revolve around the military need for a long-range patrol aircraft and a new fighter plane and the need to make a decision on these this year.

Depending on who you listen to, the LRPA could cost between $600 million and $1 billion and the fighter could also go to $1 billion or higher.

Information made available this week shows that Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and The Boeing Co. submitted LRPA proposals earlier this year that would mean about $500 million in Canadian industrial benefits over about six years plus longer term benefits for a newly viable and competitive Canadian aero industry amounting to more hundreds of millions.

At the same time recurring reports from within and outside the industry show that U.S. suppliers have been beating a path to be military door here recently with proposals for a new fighter.

The proposals include even more Canadian industrial benefits and investment-involvement in a restructured industry.

Figures mentioned in connection with the fighter proposals, while they cannot be confirmed, seem staggering.

Reports say that officials visiting Ottawa have come from Grumman, seeking to sell the F-14; MacDonnell-Douglas with the F-15; and General Dynamics with the F-16.

General Dynamics and MacDonnell-Douglas are reported talking about $6 million a plane and Grumman is reported higher than that.

Grumman is said to have presented proposals for 100 per cent offset in terms of Canadian purchases of the cost of the aircraft.

MacDonnell-Douglas, operating through its Canadian subsidiary which was one of the early losers to provide an LRPA, is said to be offering to take a 45 per cent interest in a restructured industry.

REYNOLDS SEEKING OPEN POLICE FILES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Conservative MP John Reynolds is preparing a bill allowing public access to police files.

The bill, being drafted by Reynolds and the Church of Scientology's commission on police reform, will likely be introduced in the Commons this fall.

It would give each citizen the right to inspect his own dossier, said Reynolds and allow citizens to correct wrong information.

"There's a lot of things in those files that are—shall we say—guesswork," he said.

Gasoline Tax Opponents 'Ostriches'

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Iona Campagnolo launched a counter-attack Thursday against criticism of the government's new gasoline tax, saying the Progressive Conservatives follow an ostrich school of political thought.

"Ostriches are ... big birds, but they are seldom noted for their brightness," Campagnolo (Skeena) said during noisy Commons debate of a bill authorizing the 10-cents-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline.

Opposition leader Robert Stanfield has proposed that the bill be withdrawn for six months, and the New Democratic Party has joined the Conservatives in applying unrelenting pressure on the government to back down.

"You won't do anything to solve the problem by sticking your heads in the sand for six months and hoping it will go away," said Campagnolo.

The tax on gasoline purchased for personal use was necessary to continue the subsidy program by which oil prices in and east of the Ottawa Valley are kept down to those west of the valley.

Campagnolo said Stanfield supports the subsidy program, but from there "his policies slow down just like the pace of a turgid river."

"The Conservatives would have us sit with our heads in the sand until our oil is used up, dried up and dead."

But Campagnolo said the government should be tougher with multinational oil companies "who charge what the market will bear." She did not suggest specific measures.

Government House leader Mitchell Sharp said the tax is the most ugent item of business awaiting passage before the summer recess, but opposition critics showed no sign of running out of wind.

"If this debate is a filibuster, let it be a filibuster," said James McGrath (PC-St. John's East).

"This tax will weight heavily on the low-income earners," he said. "The government should give serious consideration to withdrawing this bill."

He described the tax, which came into effect when Finance Minister John Turner introduced his June 23 budget, as "an inflationary measure contained in a disastrously inflationary budget."

Parliament must pass the bill for the tax to remain in effect. The government plans to insert a clause giving the cabinet power to exempt industry, business, farmers, fishermen, unions and other groups.

Turner has estimated that the tax will bring in $525 million a year.

Shortage Of Labor Forecast

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada could be faced "with a very severe shortage of labor" in eight years, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Thursday.

"We have too much unemployment today, but by 1982 or 1983 we are going to have a very severe restriction on the available number of people for work in this country," Mr. Andras said during the CBC television show Spotlight.

Labor force requirements "for the natural expansion of this country" would have to be considered when the government drafted its new immigration act, expected to be introduced late this year.

"But before we decide what kind of growth we can have in Canada, and therefore what kind of immigration we have in Canada, we've got to figure out how we are better going to distribute this growth across the country."

Andras has said the government would not force immigrants to settle in specific areas, but would try to come up with incentives that would encourage them to go to less populated areas.

Only Few in Airport Drug Ring

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Investigators have found "three or four" federal officials involved in a drug smuggling racket at Montreal International Airport, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Thursday.

The minister refused to tell the Commons who these people were or what had been done about them but he did reject earlier press reports that up to 60 people could be involved in the drug affair.

"I might say," he added, "that there are investigations at other airports with regard to drugs as well."

When he said that only a small number of federal officials were involved he added, without clarification, that "this does not mean that others in the federal government are not involved."

Pressed for details by J. P. Nowlan (PC — Annapolis Valley), Allmand refused to say any more beacuse the investigation was still under way.

He also refused to tell Nowlan if the officials involved were still working or if they had been suspended.

Nowlan then asked if any national revenue officials were involved, but the minister said of the "three or four" that "I would not want to identify them."

The whole issue was made public early last June when newspaper reports quoted Sgt. Jean Leduc of the RCMP drug squad as saying an investigation was under way at Montreal airport.

The report quoted Sgt. Leduc on the subject of an internal RCMP report which allegedly spoke of 60 people being involved in the drug traffic at the airport.

He was also quoted as saying "the airport is more corrupt than the harbor ever was" and "hashish is coming here by the ton. Montreal must be a major supplier for the Canadian market."

According to the reports, the RCMp had not yet been able to gather enough evidence to charge the people involved.

Allmand readily confirmed the investigation Thursday but rapped those responsible for leaking the information to the press.

"I might say as well that the release of this information was not authorized." It was due to a misunderstanding. Some measures have been taken to correct that," the minister said.

AVOID SUMMER SHOWERS WITH PRESTONE II

PRESTONE II is more than a great anti-freeze. It's a great coolant, too.

And that's something your cooling system needs in summer. To beat the heat generated by hotter running engines, automatic transmissions, power equipment, air conditioners, hot weather and traffic conditions.

Mixed 50/50 with the water in your cooling system, PRESTONE II will keep the lid on things. It raises the boiling point of water, and reduces the chances of boil-over.

PRESTONE II's patented Silicone/Silicate formula also inhibits rust and sediment build-up. So your cooling system can cool, instead of clog.

Install PRESTONE II now and avoid summer showers.

And now you can do-it-yourself! The new PRESTONE Flush & Fill Kit lets you back-flush your cooling system as well as the pros do, with just your garden hose, and install PRESTONE II in minutes. Look for this kit wherever PRESTONE II Anti-freeze and Summer Coolant is displayed.

A Difficult Decision

Prime Minister Trudeau and the federal cabinet are wrestling their collective consciences over whether to admit a delegation of observers from the Palestine Liberation Organization to a United Nations crime prevention conference in Toronto, a conference, incidentally, which Canada and Ontario encouraged and invited five years ago.

Now because the PLO and crime — especially the airplane hijacking, terrorist-bombing variety — seem synonymous in the minds of many Canadians, despite PLO leader Yasir Arafat's proffering of the olive branch and the stateless Palestinians' desire for respectability in international forums, there is agitation for the PLO delegation to be refused entry to Canada.

The politicians are doing their best to pump fog into the controversy, and neither Prime Minister Trudeau nor premier Bill Davis of the UN conference's host province, Ontario, have helped clarify the issue very much.

Davis, of course, is on the verge of calling an election in Ontario. In a mood of fine indignation, he asked Ottawa recently to refuse entry to the nasty Palestinians. There aren't many Arab voters to contend with in Ontario, and it's not often that politicians get to campaign for re-election and to come down foursquare on the side of moral righteousness at the same time.

As usual, Trudeau manages to be both petty and irrelevant with his attempt to shift the blame for inviting the conference onto Ontario. Sure, Ontario lobbied for it, but months and years before the UN voted the terrorists of the PLO official observer status in the world body.

The Arab and Jewish partisans on both sides of the issue are deranged fanatics. The Jewish Defence League's inflammatory threat of possible execution of PLO delegates who come to Toronto is nothing short of criminal, while the chief Arab spokesman, George Hajjar, past president of the Canadian Arab Federation, threatening that the Arab world will cut off trade with Canada if the PLO is not allowed in, is tantamount to blackmail.

They have all obscured the central issue, which is that we are a member of the UN, dedicated to making it work, and Canada asked for the crime conference to be held here. Canada opposed recognition of the PLO, but the majority went against us. Unless we are to repudiate entirely the idea of the UN, we cannot exclude, under temporary political pressures, a member state or associate.

Another not so minor factor in any federal decision should be consideration of an even more significant UN conference scheduled for Canada — the 1976 conference on human settlements, Habitat '76 so-called. Rejection of the PLO at the Toronto confab on crime means almost certain cancellation of next year's important meeting, which will bring several thousand delegates and world press representatives to Vancouver.

The loudest proponents of the ban-the-PLO-from-Canada crusade have very narrow blinkers on. If political murder and coldblooded terrorism are to be the grounds for exclusion from the UN, then membership would be limited to a select handful of nations.

It's a thorny problem facing the federal cabinet, but a Liberal government used to ramming through a highly unpopular pay raise for MPs and to stonewalling completely public opinion on the issue of capital punishment shouldn't have too much trouble in deciding on the unpopular, but correct, course of action in this matter.

The PLO should be allowed in, of course. But they should be watched closely, guarded by police carefully — Canada doesn't need another Kosygin incident — and generally isolated. We may have to admit them, but there's no call to welcome them.

Our Mistake

In Thursday's lead editorial entitled Juvenile Act Needs Changes, we said just that, concluding that the provincial government should amend the act. Such an action would cause a constitutional crisis as the federal government, not the provincial government, is responsible for the act. Nor do we have any intention of visiting federal sins on provincial heads. There are enough to go around. But our criticism should have been directed at the federal government, in this case, not the provincial government which appears to be tackling the problem with a verve not apparent in Ottawa.

Nixon Was No Indira Gandhi

NEW YORK — The most remarkable thing about Indira Gandhi's swift seizure of power and effective suspension of democracy in India is how easily it was accomplished. It also seems to have been widely accepted, if first reports are borne out, although it had generally been assumed that Indian democratic traditions were strong and deep.

Already, some Indians are saying that Mrs. Gandhi really had no choice, that the opposition, now mostly jailed, was truly responsible for the crisis and had forced her to take strong countermeasures.

There does seem to have been much provocative rhetoric and no doubt some opposition leaders were more anxious to get Mrs. Gandhi out of office than either her policies or her unsettled—at the time of her coup—legal difficulties warranted.

Destroyed Democracy?

But that argument is beside the point. Democracy is about nothing if not the settlement of struggles for power in the political arena, and by the voters. Arresting and jailing the opposition, imposing censorship on the press, suspending the liberties of the people, all belong to dictatorial government. The defenders of Mrs. Gandhi's action delude themselves if they assert that she took it to save Indian democracy. Instead, she took advantage of its weakness and may well have destroyed it.

Americans, having just emerged from the Watergate crisis, which resulted in the resignation of Richard Nixon as president, are bound to be struck by the haunting question why Nixon did not try something like Mrs. Gandhi has done.

After all, the similarities are deep. He was in legal trouble, whether he should remain in office was being debated, given his and his aides' attitudes about the press and the opposition, as well as the long history of political unrest through the 1960s and into the 1970s. Nixon might well have believed there was a conspiracy afoot to remove him—and surely could have adduced more of what he would have called "evidence" of that conspiracy than Mrs. Gandhi has, or probably can, adduce to support her charges of "a deep and widespread conspiracy" in India.

To his credit, however, Nixon never really tried to cling to power by the ruthless means adopted by Mrs. Gandhi. The reasons are not hard to find. For one thing, the American constitution has no clause explicitly permitting the executive to suspend the liberties of citizens whenever that executive perceives, or thinks it perceives, or says it perceives, some internal threat.

American governing institutions also are effectively divided, and the divisions still have great meaning. Could Nixon have arrested everybody in congress, or all ranking Democrats, or all the supreme court justices and justices of the federal branch, or all 50 state governors? Even had he or some other president taken over Washington with tanks and machineguns, opposition might swiftly have been rallied around powerful state governors.

TWO PRIME MINISTERS
. . . on Trudeau's 1971 visit to India

But there are deeper reasons. When Nixon—then still powerful and feared—forced the resignation of Attorney-General Elliot Richardson, fired his deputy, William Ruckelshaus, and fired the special Watergate investigator, Archibald Cox, the moment might have been at hand for a coup.

That moment, however, was greeted by a "firestorm" of public protest, by the massed and fierce resentment of millions of aroused Americans. Nixon could have seized certain forms of power, but he could not have rested easy with them, or governed by anything but continuing force.

When the supreme court ruled that he had to give up his White House tapes to the second special prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, Nixon's attorneys speculated publicly and even suggested in his court brief that a president of the United States could decide for himself what the constitution required, thus raising the possibility that Nixon would not obey the court order. But he did obey it, making his departure from office inevitable.

As that became clearer to all, Secretary of Defence James Schlesinger—a man who owed his many government posts to Richard Nixon's appointments—quietly took steps to assure that military units could not be ordered or persuaded by the White House to keep Nixon in office by force of arms.

Lessons Taught

By then, too, Nixon's closest White House aides, some of them men who not only owed their positions to Nixon but who had been loyally at his side throughout the Watergate ordeal, were telling him he had no further choice but to resign the presidency or face certain conviction of the impeachment charges voted by the house of representatives.

Nixon lacked, that is, a quiescent public either unconcerned for democracy or easily gulled into swallowing fake conspiracy charges.

In key positions, he lacked unquestioning and blindly obedient officials who would do whatever he ordered. He lacked either the tradition or the legal power that would have enabled him plausibly to set the constitution aside. But merely to cite those lacks is to recall how nearly in the years of the imperial presidency preceding Watergate, a quiescent public, pliable public officials and a flouted constitution did combine to erode and destroy democracy in America. That near miss, as well as Mrs. Gandhi's coup, teach their own lessons.

Unfair Publicity

I would like to set things straight in regard to our application for a leisure club in Victoria.

On our original application to the mayor and the city council of Victoria we asked for permission to operate a leisure club. Nowhere in the letter was the name of the future club mentioned. We were well aware by that time that the name Garden of Allah was insulting to our Moslem friends and had already advised them that we had no intention of using that name again in any of our future clubs. As a matter of fact, as soon as it is financially viable, we are changing the name of our Richmond club, in order to correct the unhappy situation for the Muslim community which we had quite accidentally caused.

Since I had spoken neither to the mayor or aldermen prior to their committee meeting, I am curious as to the description applied to me of having a silver tongue and being some sort of creature. I find these remarks extremely offensive and I feel the mayor should not pre-judge people before meeting them or hearing their case. It is hardly becoming to a public servant.

I also desire satisfaction with regard to remarks made regarding one of the two municipalities not being overly happy with the operation of one of our leisure clubs.

This unfair and most unpleasant publicity has already caused us the loss of a select location for our "Roman Gardens" operation and I sincerely hope the city of Victoria's mayor and council, which harbors our democratic seat of government, will give me a fair and civilized hearing when I appear before their committee. — William A. Gold, President, Cosmopolitan Ventures Ltd., Richmond, B.C.

St. Catharines Festival

We are searching for names and addresses of residents who once lived in St. Catharines, Ontario, so that we may invite them back home for a homecoming week celebration during the 100th birthday of St. Catharines in 1976.

A varied program of centennial events has been planned for our former residents enjoyment, consisting of outdoor corn roasts and barbeques, a grand parade and fireworks display, horse-drawn buggy rides, a roaring 20s dance, tours of the city, school reunions, plus many other interesting activities.

If you are a former resident or know someone who is, we would appreciate having their name and address so that a personal homecoming invitation can be mailed to them. Please send your reply to: St. Catharines Centennial, Post Office Box 1976, Lincoln Trust House, 60 James Street, St. Catharines, Ontario L2R 6Z4. — Jean Birnie, Chairman, Name-Gathering Committee.

Dry Rot of Apathy

I am indebted to Clive Baxter for his item in the current issue (July 12) indicating the most effective way to go about a successful lobby at Ottawa. The Financial Post is to be commended for bringing this matter to our attention.

The article begins "People who really want to guide and influence government policy are wasting their time dealing with the members of parliament, senators and usually even with ministers. If you really want results — rather than just the satisfaction of talking to the prominent — you deal with us, and at various levels." That is how one senior civil servant put it to F. P. talking about the question of how to deal with the ever growing power of government. (end of quote).

Appended to the item is a list of official lobbys that covers the spectrum of interested groups across Canada. All the way from Academy of Medicine to Union of National Defence Employees. 137 in all, and nowhere in that list do I see anyone who is, or seems to be, lobbying for the senior citizen.

When are the senior citizens across Canada going to shake themselves free from their lethargy and marshall their potential muscle and to be applied where it will do the most good.

Just for added spice, in the same issue, there is a letter from Mr. Ian Hunter, Associate professor, faculty of law, University of Western Ontario, London. "Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa is quoted as saying (F. P. June 7) "Imagine" said Bourassa, snapping his fingers "the Magna Carta — out — just like that. It is a very radical change to switch the burden of proof — but we've done it with little outcry."

This is a fair indication of how far the dry rot of apathy and indifference have penetrated into the fabric of our society. — W. E. Bennett, 2915 Colquitz Ave.

Fire Has Dimmed

This, without question, will be the most difficult letter I've had cause to write. As a youth in Newfoundland I recall a feeling of love for the land, love for the country and appreciation of efforts being made to improve upon the lot of a people not overly blessed with material prosperity.

Opportunities existed, although not in abundance, and we strove to make the most of them. In the process we developed pride in our sense of accomplishment in the face of odds, and characters were formed. Without it ever being discussed we realized a feeling of patriotism.

A very real part of those times was the genuine practice of sharing and doing for others. This resulted in an inner feeling that can be understood only by those who have encountered it.

The day came when we became an integral part of Canada. Oh what a wonderful day that was. We were now second to none on the globe in our potential. Potential for what? Affluence? Decidedly. Happiness? The natural by-product of affluence.

We watched our country prosper and to a limited degree prospered along with it. We watched the labor unions grow strong and accomplish much needed reform. We watched our national government with respect.

The years passed and imperceptible changes occurred. We, as individuals, became insular and, could we admit to it, selfish? Attainment led to the desire for further attainment, with no consideration of cost or consequence. Giving and sharing changed to wanting and grasping.

Labor unions reached the indefinable line of sensibility . . . and crossed it. We now sought to derive more from our society than we contributed to it. Power and patronage in government no longer created shock.

Our once respected laws lost significance. A consequential portion of our legal profession abused their offices for monetary gain, with resultant loss of respect. Our legislators acted like spoiled children in their attempts to gain or retain power.

Corporate power, with ability to brainwash, blossomed, not necessarily in the national interest. Our theatrical entertainment and to a degree, our publications, sank to a level of degradation that exemplifies our national character.

We have an abundance of government but no leadership. No longer do we ask direct questions, we are overwhelmed by bureaucracy. We have raised the white flag.

Consumer goods reflect the lack of pride that goes into their assembly. Can we say that the avalanche of media advertising being thrust upon us is based on fact, on truth? Are we giving the support required to our law enforcement agencies? Contrary to the old adage, crime is paying. Paradoxically the high cost of education is not.

Well, today I have paused to reflect. I've loved this country over the years. I am now 46 years old and God willing I might look forward to a number of years to hold an opinion, one way or another, of this land I call home.

As to whether the fire of patriotism that burned so brightly in the heart of that Newfoundland boy still exists, you may be the judge.—C. M. Chambers, 3210 Woodburn Avenue.

Teen-Age Help

I would like to take this opportunity to polish up the sometimes tarnished reputation of the current crop of long-haired teenagers, by publicly thanking three young men, driving a small red mini station wagon who stopped and changed a flat tire on my car this Monday past. I am most grateful for their thoughtfulness and quick assistance.—Carol M. Brady, Victoria.

Lear Manuscripts

We have been commissioned by the Oxford University Press to edit a new edition of Edward Lear's nonsense, and we write to ask your help in tracing drawings, letters or any Lear manuscripts, whether nonsense or otherwise. We have already traced a considerable amount of this unpublished material, but more yet remains in both public and private collections.

We will take great care of any material entrusted to us, and will pay postage or reproduction costs. — Vivien Noakes, Charles Lewsen, 146 Hamilton Terrace, St. John's Wood, London, NW8 9VX.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 19, 1915

LONDON — Fifty thousand women of England gathered on Victoria Embankment and paraded through the streets with banners flying to demonstrate their enthusiastic desire to be enlisted in the service of the country. There was a remarkable scene when the minister of munitions, David Lloyd George, appeared on a platform with the suffragette leader, Emmaline Pankhurst. The main body of the procession was made up of groups representing France, Russia, Japan, Serbia and Poland in national costumes. Some of the banners read: Shells Made by a Wife May Save a Husband, British Women Will Beat the German Women and Women will Save England.

A Rising Demand for Uranium: Who Will Supply It?

By ROBERT GILLETTE

By quadrupling the world price of oil in the last three years the petroleum exporting nations have helped impel a strong global search toward nuclear power as other nations seek new and cheaper sources of energy. The rush toward dependence on uranium, the basic fuel of nuclear power plants, has been so rapid that resource analysts are beginning to worry about the possibility of a worldwide uranium shortage in the 1980's, with political and economic disruptions potentially as severe as those of the current oil squeeze.

As with most natural resources, the uranium supply question has two parts: Does the world have enough uranium to satisfy forseeable demands, and if so, can it be found, mined and refined fast enough to keep pace with the proliferation of nuclear power plants? The short answer to the first part is probably yes, if consumers are willing to pay the price. The second answer is more complex.

Mineral ores of uranium, the heaviest natural element, occur in a variety of geologic settings, from ancient pre-Cambrian conglomerate formations in South Africa's gold fields to relatively young sandstones in the American Southwest. Amost every rock form contains traces of uranium, and the element can even be extracted from sea water though at enormous cost.

One of uranium's chief advantages, however, is its low cost compared with oil and the relative insensitivty of nuclear electric power costs to fluctuations in uranium price. But maintaining this advantage will require the discovery and development of major new deposits of high-grade ore in the next decade to supplement known reserves in Australia, Canada, the United States, Sweden, South Africa and South West Africa.

Whether a global expansion of highgrade reserves will be possible is an open question. John A. Patterson, the supply evaluation chief of the Energy Research and Development Administration, notes that if projected growth rates for nuclear power hold true in the next decade or so, uranium production must expand faster than the output of virtually every other raw material, including oil, has thus far in the 20th centruy.

A recent study by the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute concludes that "unless exploration activites are stepped up soon," and unless huge new reserves mineable at relatively low cost are found, "there may well be a 'uranium crisis' in the mid-1980's."

A few statistics convey the fast pace of nuclear development. At the beginning of 1975, accoring to the International Atomic Energy Agency's count, 170 nuclear power reactors in 19 countries were generating 73,000 megawatts of electricity. By 1980, if all the additional plants now planned or under construction start up roughly on schedule, 393 nuclear reactors in 28 countries will be turning out 270,000 megawatts.

With continued growth in the 1980's and beyond, statistics of the Energy Research and Development Administration indicate that world uranium demand will exceed 5 million tons by the end of the century. The world's "assured" and "probable" reserves of high-grade uranium now total 3.8 million tons, leaving a million-ton oeficit in the mid-1980's.

The United States, with nearly a third of the world's high-grade uranium ores, ought logically to feel secure from any such shortage. Energy Research and Development Administration officials do, in fact, believe United States reserves will be adequate during the 1980's. Fifty-five plants are operable now and, in spite of recent delays, as many as 236 could be running in 1985.

If reliance on nuclear power is to grow in the United States beyond 1985 levels, more nuclear plants will require major new reserve additions. While logic and geology would suggest that large new ore deposits remain to be found, the prospects are best described as mixed. Mining companies have not found a single large new ore field in the United States since 1957 and the amount of uranium being found per foot of drilling is half what it was five years ago.

An Energy Research and Development Administration review panel concluded last March that the American uranium industry may need a substantial injection of government support. The panel recommended that the federal government guarantee minimum prices for uranium and provide some new form of tax incentive.

What if the uranium mining industry fails to blossom on schedule? In the long run, the controversial breeder reactor might help. The present generation of nuclear power plants burns Uranium-235; the easily fissionable form of the metal that makes up less than 1 per cent of natural uranium. Breeders are intended to convert much of the currently useless remainder, Uranium-238, into plutonium, a new fissionable fuel, thereby stretching America's uranium resource by a factor of 50 or more. But even if technologists are able to overcome environmental objections to the breeder and plutonium, the breeder is unlikely to help much before the second or third decade of the 21st century.

A second alternative is thorium, a relatively plentiful, mildly radioactive metal that can be converted in existing reactors to yet another new nuclear fuel, Uranium-233. But the technology for thorium conversion is moving slowly.

The third and simplest alternative is to import uranium. If Australia, Canada and South Africa are unable or unwilling to sate the American appetite for uranium, the next most probable suppliers are a clutch of emerging African nations — Gabon, Niger and the Central African Republic — with the makings of a cartel. Brazil, which reported a new find last week, may be another potential source.

CANADA LACKS A POLICY

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

On the evidence to date Canada is taking the same thoughtless route with its supplies of uranium as it did with its oil and natural gas reserves. We're selling it off instead of thinking of our own future needs.

The signs are ominiously familiar. Remember the early 1970s, when Canadians were led to believe they were wallowing in oil and gas enough to meet Canadian demands far into the future, and with lots left over to sell abroad?

We know all too well now that those rosy assurances were ill-founded. Canada faces serious and imminent shortages of domestic gas and oil. The odds are that we're going to face the same crisis with uranium if the federal government doesn't soon come up with a policy aiming at conserving enough of this vital nuclear fuel for Canadian needs as far into the future as can be reasonably anticipated.

On the face of it, Canada looks comfortably well off in uranium reserves. We have about a fifth of the world supply—something over 300,000 tons certain and an estimated 400,000 more. At present, we only use about 400 tons a year.

But use of uranium is going to rise with stunning speed. At present about 3 per cent of Ontario's electricity is generated by nuclear power. By 1990 it will be 26 per cent.

Nuclear-powered electrical generating stations, like Ontario Hydro's Pickering plant, were regarded as an unaffordable luxury in many parts of the world until oil prices began to scar. With promises of even more oil price increases, atomic generators and the uranium to fuel them become increasingly competitive.

Experts estimate that from now on world demand for uranium will accelerate by between 14 and 20 per cent a year. And, as Franc Joubin, a Canadian nuclear energy pioneer and technical consultant to the United Nations, said in a recent speech:

"Sustained rates of growth of this magnitude have never been experienced by any other major mineral commodity. And it is for this reason that we, the exploration geologists and the nuclear development planners, are concerned about the availability of uranium supplies."

They're not the only ones. All Canadians should be concerned that there will always be enough of this native fuel to feed the reactors that will increasingly supply the electricity to heat and light their homes, keep their factories humming and perhaps even power their cars.

The need for this assurance is even more crucial for uranium than it was for petroleum, as Canada becomes more committed to nuclear energy. While electric utilities and other industrial users of oil, natural gas and coal can switch (though expensively) from one to the other in the event of shortages, a nuclear plant needs uranium. If uranium runs out, the plant shuts down.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald announced, first in January of last year, and against last fall, a proposed new policy that would require uranium producers to keep in reserve certain stipulated amounts sufficient to meet current and projected domestic demands. A group within his department is working out details.

But meanwhile, in May of this year, the Atomic Energy Control Board authorized six export contracts to supply 20,340 tons of uranium to Britain, Spain, West Germany, Finland and Italy. In June, the board gave the nod for a sale of 20,000 tons to Japan, starting in 1984 and continuing over a 10-year period.

Did the board have the findings of Macdonald's appraisal group when it made these decisions? If so, why haven't they been made public?

If not, Canadians can start to worry seriously whether with our uranium policy — or lack of it — we are beginning to skid down the same oil-slicked road to folly that we followed with petroleum.

Zambia Forgot It Was Poor

By DAVID MARTIN
London Observer

LUSAKA — Zambia's President Kenneth Kaunda bluntly told his country the other day: "The decoration on the front of the Mercedes has almost become our national emblem instead of the pick and hoe displayed on our coat of arms."

That one comment about summed up much of the economic and political misdirection of this country in the decade since independence. Zambia was born with a silver spoon in its mouth and now it is finding out that it was only copper plated.

The nation, said Kaunda, in an economic report to the National Council of the ruling United National Independence Party, did not need to be reminded that "we wasted money foolishly." Nor for that matter did anyone else. Lusaka airport, the broad highway into town, the $8,200,000 Mulungushi Hall with its copper dome and the downtown glass and concrete skyscrapers are all edifices to a nation that forgot it was poor.

You can buy imported cheeses, tinned frog legs, snails and an unlimited selected of wines and whiskies in the supermarkets. In the shops there are expensive evening gowns and stereo equipment costing over $2,200. Alongside the Intercontinental Hotel, which is 60 per cent government-owned, Zambia's third casino is being built and inside hundreds of thousands of pounds worth of Persian carpets are for sale.

But what you cannot get are farm gates, some important types of tractors and cultivators and building timber. The tastes of the white population and the black bourgeoisie are well catered for. But those of the farmer are neglected. Many tractors are lying idle because of shortages of spare parts in what is a basically agricultural country.

Copper is at the heart of Zambia's economic problems today. At independence the price was 340 pounds a ton. Increased world demand raised it to 670 pounds in 1969 and to its all time high of 1,300 pounds in April last year. Now it has fallen to 490 pounds (now worth about $1,000).

It is true that Zambia has suffered greatly since Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence in November 1965 and border closure early in 1973. Expensive airlifts and emergency trucking operations had to be mounted and new roads and railways built.

KAUNDA

But the key to the country's economic malaise lies in the failure of President Kaunda's government to do anything effective to mobilize the rural subsistence population which makes up over three-quarters of the 4,600,000 people.

The cold agricultural statistics speak for themselves. Of 9,200 farms delineated on the land map only about 3,000 are occupied. Approximately 550 commercial farmers last year produced 52 per cent of the country's maize, 35 per cent of the beef, 61 per cent of milk, 69 per cent of pork and bacon and 50 per cent of the 16 million pounds of tobacco which was grown, which was two-thirds of the crop at independence. Tobacco remains Zambia's only real agricultural export but even so the country still imported $4,400,000 worth of luxury cigarettes.

Of the commercial farmers 41 per cent are British, 33 per cent Zambian (which includes Europeans who have taken citizenship or Zambian-owned farms managed by Europeans), and 16 per cent South African. Supplies produced by the 3,500,000 Africans, not classified as commercial farmers, or imports, account for the remainder of the national requirement.

Last year $66 million was spent on food imports. Milk production fell 40 per cent and only 30 tons of wheat were produced in this country of 288,131 square miles (nearly as big as the United Kingdom and France combined): a further 112,000 tons having to be imported at a cost of $37 million. Only one-third of one per cent, or 960 square miles, of the whole country is effectively farmed.

Inflation for the upper income group has increased by 16 per cent and the unit value for the same level of imports has increased 65 per cent in the past five years. Prices of basic commodities have been checked since 1972, but only through massive subsidies, and state-run companies have been showing huge losses.

One such business, Indeco Milling at Ndola, illustrates the way money has been squandered. Since it was taken over 20 months ago, head office expenses have gone up 71 per cent, vehicle expenses by 144 per cent, salaries and wages by 108 per per cent, entertainment by 167 cent, travel expenses by 186 per cent and advertising by 2,111 per cent. Elsewhere the story is similar and President Kaunda observed he was ashamed to admit that it was the capitalist companies that were trying to check spiralling costs.

With copper barely economic to mine, foreign reserves down to $30 million and the agricultural sector stagnant, Zambia is no longer the rich "paradise" Kaunda once used to boast it was.

His problems are compounded by the unhealthy cynisism which exists and which greeted his speech in many quarters. His black bourgeoisie are deeply entrenched, even within the ranks of his cabinet.

While declaring war on capitalism and committing Zambia to socialism, Kaunda said in an authoritarian speech that he was willing to accept people in the cabinet and party central committee who had business interests so long as they did not take government salaries. Therein lies part of the Zambian leader's dilemma, for that clearly poses conflicts of interest and raises an ideological contradiction.

He is believed to have tried to heal one of the most conspicuous political rifts in Zambia by asking Simon Kapwepwe, one time vice-president who in 1971 formed a rival party which was later banned, back into the fold. But Kapwepwe is reported to have refused.

Zambia today is at the centre of the world stage because of Kaunda's role in the politics of Southern Africa, but the deep economic trouble the country is in could invite political repercussions at home.

Blooms Without Challenge

By HENRY MITCHELL

It is startling what harm can be done to a flower's reputation by a good disposition.

The squeaking wheel gets the oil, and if a machine, an institution, a person or a flower just goes along not giving anybody any trouble, then the world says, "Huh?" if you point out its patient merit.

"Oh, them," people say of daylilies. They say the same thing of musk roses, chicory, wormwood and other marvelous things that require no pampering.

But these same flowers, if you had to face east and water them with unsalted tears (as you do a mecomoposis, delphinium, or crested dryopteris), then one would say, after secret anguish and much carrying on, "Yes, they have done well, and I cannot think why; I suppose I was lucky," knowing perfectly well the other person does not believe that for a minute.

The daylily, a veritable prince of Asian herbs, is now available in several hundred (several thousand, if one is really determined) varieties.

With me the two earliest kinds are both rather out of date — fanciers of the daylily would hardly think them worthy, since showier sorts have come along in more recent years — and I grow them chiefly for their early bloom.

They are quite reliable by mid-June, and they are "Emily Brown," a rather assertive, flaunting orange to bear such an innocent name, and "Lady Bountiful," a lemon-primrose that is too tall to suit many gardeners (chest to shoulder height) and with not too good a stem, either, since it can lean hither and yon a bit instead of standing up like a straight post.

Lists of varieties are not especially valuable, since new kinds come and go, and besides it makes all the difference whether the gardener wants low sorts of color of canteloupes, or chest-high orange kinds, or miniature knee-high varieties of pale lemon. Or whatever it is the gardener does want.

Suffice it to say that the pale and medium yellows are the loveliest, especially the ones with a good bit of green in them, and the pinkish apricot sorts, ranging from flesh to deep lemon (sometimes with tangerine throats) are pretty irresistible.

Then there are a number of old (and inexpensive) reds like "Bess Ross" and "Alan" that nobody can pass by.

I do not care so much for the strong, rich oranges and therefore marvel to see I have a number of them, of which "Burning Daylight" is perhaps the most popular, while "Tropic Tangerine" verges toward orange canteloupe.

There are miniature types, too, with quiet small blooms from ping-pong to tennis-ball size, but I should warn you these can become a great enthusiasm and bring out the collector's instinct, — which is always to be resisted by sane persons. I do greatly like the Lemony Little "Cirky" and the somewhat larger "Little Rainbow," which is straw buff flushed with pink and lemon.

To my mind, the best thing is to visit a specialist's garden where the kinds are labeled, and make a selection based on personal taste.

Air Canada, Lebanese Deal Bared

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada entered into a confidential agreement with Lebanon's tourism minister last year whereby he was appointed as the airline's Middle East representative and promised certain expenses for promoting the airline in his own country, says Air Canada vice-president John McGill.

The Lebanese minister, Souren Khanamarian, was to be allowed up to $5,000 a year in expenses at a time when Air Canada was trying to get landing rights in Lebanon, Mr. McGill said in an interview Thursday.

An inquiry commission headed by Judge Willard Estey is investigating payments of $100,000 made to Montreal travel agent Robert McGregor by Air Canada. Under the letter of agreement for the payments, Mr. McGregor was to influence "governments and trade in the Middle East and Latin America."

Mr. Khanamarian left his post as tourism minister during a government crisis several months ago and never collected any expense money, Mr. McGill said, although Air Canada still considers the agreement as being in force.

"The only tacky part of the whole thing is that the guy was minister of tourism at the time," he said.

The national interests of the country were always to take precedence over the airline's, he said.

Mr. McGill, who succeeded Yves Menard as the airline's vice-president of marketing, did not hold his current post when the deal with the minister was made but he said he was familiar with the case.

The cabinet minister was "to receive neither salary nor commission" for his services but was to be given a first-class pass on the airline, Mr. McGill said.

Mr. McGill said the airline did nothing wrong in promising to make confidential payments to a foreign cabinet minister but he said he believed the matter should have been kept secret.

Mr. Khanamarian's position as Air Canada representative was not to be made known either to his cabinet colleagues or to the rest of the business community in Lebanon, he said.

At the time the agreement was signed, the airline was considering starting service to Lebanon within a few months. Mr. Khanamarian once acted as host at a dinner party for Mr. Menard and invited cabinet colleagues and other airline executives, said Mr. McGill.

"He never claimed one cent for it," he added.

The airline does have other such commercial representatives around the world "but they are few," said Mr. McGill.

Ottawa Housing Tactics Don't Dent Mortgages

OTTAWA (CP) — Recent federal housing measures have had little impact on the tight mortgage market, say housing experts.

One trust company executive said this week he sees no sign of a drop in mortgage rates and a banking official remarked that there were good chances rates will continue rising.

A Central Mortgage and Housing Corp (CMHC) official said he is pessimistic about prospects for a significant improvement in the pace of mortgage committments for the balance of the year.

Mortgage interest rates and the supply of mortgage money are considered prime factors in the current housing squeeze. Rates vary between 10.75 per cent and almost 12 per cent with some trust companies saying they already have exhausted their year's allotment of mortgage funds.

Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said Monday he is disturbed about the conflicting views he is receiving about the availability of mortgage funds and how the money is being lent. He was writing mortgage lenders to get definite answers on these matters.

The June federal budget offered little to help stimulate the struggling housing construction industry and nothing much to aid the mortgage market, lenders say.

And only a few days after the budget, Treasury Board President Jean Chretien announced the cabinet decision to delay further setting up the Federal Mortgage Exchange Corp.

The decision to wipe out the $75-million budget to create FMEC this year has disappointed CMHC officials and some lenders who say the FMEC would have provided a progressively stabilizing influence on the mortgage market.

It would have given major mortgage lenders a market for selling mortgages when they needed the cash. Mortgages also could be bought through the FMEC.

The Residential Mortgage Financing Act, which created FMEC and opened the way for private mortgage investment companies, has yet to fulfil its promise.

Former urban affairs minister Ron Basford said, at the time the legislation was approved in December, 1973, that the act would stimulate the mortgage market, encouraging pension funds investment in mortgages through the mortgage investment companies.

But finance department officials say response to the legislation has been less than expected with only five companies licensed as mortgage investment firms and only four active.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Requests for conditional discharges by two men who pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Thursday to posssession of narcotics were rejected by Judge William Ostler.

William Paul Barcley, 24, of 1341 Cadillac, admitted having marijuana and asked for a conditional discharge. He said he only had a small amount of the narcotic when arrested Monday evening and wanted to take graduate studies in the fall. A sentence, Barcley said, might jeopardize his future.

Federal drug prosecutor Malcolm McMicken noted, however, that Barcley had a 1971 Ontario conviction for possession of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking.

Ostler decided to impose a $150 fine.

Thirty-two year-old Gerald Murphy, 2873 Park View, asked for a discharge because he felt a conviction for posssession of hashish would affect his career. Murphy said his job requires that he bonded on occasions. He added that he had no previous record.

Ostler said a conviction would not bring "substaintial prejudice" to Murphy. He gave him a suspended sentence and placed him on six months probation.

★ ★ ★

"It seems a shame that young people like this simply will not try to realize their potential," said Ostler in sentencing 19-year-old Craig Arthur Scott, 1032 Balmoral.

Scott pleaded guilty earlier to a June 12 break-in at Metro Electronics, 1719 Quadra, and theft of a stereo speaker, receiver and tape deck worth $705.

Ostler said young people "are willing to sort of drift along and, in the end when they finally wake up, it's a little too late."

"It's really despressing to see young people waste themselves ... that's what troubles me," the judge added.

He gave Scott a suspended sentence, placed him on one-year probation and ordered him to perform 40 hours of community service work.

Richard Thomas Attwood, 22, of 735 Belton, elected trial by judge and jury on a charge of possession of marijuana and hashish Monday for the purpose of trafficking and possession of cocaine at the same time.

Attwood remains free, awaiting preliminary hearing Sept. 26. Bail was set at $2,000 on Wednesday.

Schools Seek Aid

The Federation of Independent Schools Associations and the British Columbia School Trustees Association are urging the provincial government to expand peripheral education services to private schools.

Both groups met in Victoria Wednesday with a committee of the provincial cabinet studying basic services for children such as school buses, and libraries.

Picket Continues At Beaver Pub

Five people suspended from their jobs in the Empress Hotel's Beaver pub plan to continue their informational picket line at the hotel's front entrance later today.

Bill Harris, one of the five suspended Tuesday and Wednesday after they refused to serve a customer they had earlier barred from service, said today the picket line will be set up between 2 and 4 p.m. on the sidewalk in front of the hotel's main entrance.

Three of the five people, Harris, Susan Krappell and Maryann Campbell, say they were fired Tuesday night when they refused to serve the customer after they had been ordered to do so by the management.

The other two, Dawn Zowtuk and Christie Heron, said they were fired Wednesday before their shifts started when they indicated they would also refuse to serve the customer.

Empress general manager Ted Balderson said today the position of the hotel management was that the five walked out and were not fired.

He said the barring of any person for a long-term period from the pub is a decision for the management to make, not the staff. He said the five should have stayed on the job, served the customer and then launched a grievance through the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers Union which covers the Empress.

Harris said today he was still convinced he and the others were fired.

"We made it clear we were willing to stay in the pub and work but that we would not serve that customer, and we were fired," he said.

Under the CBRT contract at the Empress, an employee cannot be fired until after a three-day investigation. The union contract stipulates that the employee can be "held out of service" for three days until the investigation is completed.

The three-day period ends today and the five are expecting to hear the outcome later today.

SPECTATOR PUNCHES BANDSMEN

OTTAWA (CP) — A man ran amok just before the changing of the guard ceremony on Parliament Hill Thursday, punching a drum major in the mouth and knocking the hat off the next officer in the parade.

He broke loose from spectators just as a Canadian Forces Air Force band detail was nearing Elgin and Wellington streets.

A police escort for the parade subdued the man and took him to police headquarters for questions.

The man is said to have told one police officer "these are the same men who shot at me 25 years ago."

Nixon's Records Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) Former president Richard Nixon will be questioned within the next eight days by lawyers whose clients are seeking the documents of his years in the White House.

A federal court ruled Thursday that if Nixon continues seeking those documents, he must submit to an oral deposition. If that occurs, the deposition will mark the second time Nixon has answered questions since leaving office.

The first came late last month, when two members of a now-defunct Watergate grand jury and members of the special Watergate prosecutor's office questioned Nixon.

The grand jury testimony involved criminal investigations, but the coming deposition focuses only on what will become of the millions of documents and hundreds of hours of tape accumulated during the Nixon presidency.

The deposition was ordered by U.S. District Judge Aubrey Robinson and U.S. Appeals Court Judge Carl McGowan, members of a special three-judge panel considering disposition of the Nixon records.

William Dobrovir, lawyer for columnist Jack Anderson, sought Nixon's testimony on how Nixon justifies his case that the papers and tapes belong to him rather than being in the public domain.

Air Canada Was Last to Hear

MONTREAL (CP) — The day the Canadian public learned of a $100,000 payment by Air Canada to a Montreal travel agent, senior officials of the airline were still unaware of the motive for the transaction, an inquiry into the airline's financial operations was told Thursday.

On April 17, Progressive Conservative MP Elmer Mackay (Central Nova) revealed to the Commons that Air Canada had paid a consulting fee of $100,000 to travel agent R. Y. McGregor so that the latter would influence "governments and trade in the Middle East and Latin America" on the airline's behalf.

However, testified Claude Taylor, Air Canada's president for public affairs, senior officials of the airline had learned about the payment only in the weeks prior to its disclosure in the Commons. And when they did, he added, it appeared that no consluting services were involved.

The payment had been authorized by Yves Menard, vice-president for marketing of Air Canada, before his resignation in February over an alleged conflict of interest involving a villa he owned in the Barbados.

Taylor said that during discussions six days before the disclosure by Mackay, he learned one of the original objects of the payment was to purchase an option for equity in a national travel agency scheme being developed by McGregor.

The inquiry has already been told that the scheme would have involved the airline, the McGregor agency, and travel agencies in Toronto and Vancouver.

As news of the $100,000 payment was being revealed in the Commons on April 17, Taylor testified, he joined Air Canada president Ralph Vaughan in a meeting with three other airline officials who had been closely involved with the McGregor negotiations.

Asked by Mr. Justice Willard Estey, inquiry commissioner, whether the meeting provided him and Vaughan with the answers to all their questions, Taylor replied: "No, I wouldn't say that we were satisfied with their answers."

Taylor also testified he attended a meeting that same night at which Air Canada chairman Yves Pratte and McGregor were in attendance.

"It's my recollection of McGregor's position at the meeting," Taylor told the inquiry, "that there was really no substance to the consulting services proposal and that it was really a means to an end."

Asked by Mr. Justice Estey whether any "gentlemanly hints" were made that night to McGregor for return of the money, Taylor responded that a "gentlemanly hint was made that the money should be returned." However, the travel agent responded with "the gentlemanly hint that that might be hard to do," Taylor said.

"Do you feel that you got to the bottom" of the transaction, asked Mr. Justice Estey.

"No," replied Taylor. "I still think there were some unanswered questions . . . that we hadn't got to the bottom of things."

In the next few days, he told the inquiry, he contacted Menard who told him the payment for consulting services was the only way Air Canada could pay McGregor the money for possible equity operations without violating the travel agent's licence or the airline's charter.

IRA TRUCE REMAINS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Irish Republican Army spokesmen say they consider a five-month-old cease-fire still in effect despite a bombing Thursday that killed four British soldiers.

The Provisional wing of the outlawed IRA claimed responsibility for the bomb, which was hidden in a metal milk churn beneath a pile of stone near Forkhill, 56 miles southwest of Belfast.

The deaths, the largest single toll of British personnel in Northern Ireland, in 14 months, brought to six the number of soldiers killed in the province this year.

More than 1,200 persons have died in the Provisionals' six-year battle to drive the British soldiers from Northern Ireland.

The IRA Provisionals said the bombing was in retaliation for the killing of an IRA staff captian by British troops on June 4 and the slaying in Belfast last weekend of a 16-year-old youth.

They accused the British Army of "continued harassment of the population" in Northern Ireland despite the cease-fire called by the Provisionals last Feb. 10.

But spokesmen from both sides said the incident did not mean the truce had broken down.

Billy Drumm, a spokesman for Sinn Fein, the Provisionals' political front, said, "Political comments have been suggesting the imminent end of the truce since February when it was introduced. But it's still with us and I have no reason to believe the speculation is any more accurate today."

Sources close to the Provisionals' military command said the truce "hangs not on individual incidents but on a continuing dialogue."

Elbow Smashed In Shootout

EDMONTON (CP) — A city police detective whose elbow was shattered by a gunman Wednesday may lose the use of his arm and is expected to be off work for up to a year.

Detective Dick Bevan, 34, also was wounded in the other arm while looking for three men who robbed a Bank of Nova Scotia branch Wednesday afternoon.

Three men appeared in court Thursday in connection with the incident and were remanded until July 24.

Samuel James Wood, 31, of no fixed address, faces two charges of attempted murder and one of armed robbery. Douglas Raymond Coumont, 24, and Robert Joseph Lemaire, 38, of Edmonton each face one charge of attempted murder.

The incident began when a man—armed with a rifle escaped with about $1,400 from the bank branch. Witnesses saw the man enter a nearby apartment building. Detective Bevan was shot while police were looking for the man.

The three-storey building was evacuated and the gunman moved around inside it, firing random shots until police moved in eight hours later with dogs and tear gas.

Police criticized two radio stations for broadcasting the address of the shoot-out. A crowd of several hundred gathered to watch, causing concern someone would be shot.

Land Tax Appeal Granted

By AB KENT
Times Staff

B.C. Supreme Court has ruled undeveloped buffer land may be considered as residential for assessment purposes, and escape significant tax increases of the past two years.

In a judgment delivered this week, Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton granted an appeal involving four acres of treed land owned by members of the Hutchison family and adjoining the residence of Bruce Hutchison, 810 Rogers, in the Saanich Lake Hill district.

P. W. Klassen, who appeared for the appellant Robert B. Hutchison, a part owner and trustee, said the decision would not have an automatic effect on properties used for similar purposes elsewhere in the province. Each assessment appeal, he said, must stand on its own.

But where the circumstances are like those in the Hutchison case, a property owner could expect to be successful in the appeal.

Klassen said the amount of assessment was not at issue, but he acknowledged that the jump between 1973 and 1974 was substantial as far as the Hutchison proeprty is concerned.

Legislation was amended at that time to permit assessors to place 50 per cent of current value on land not being used for residential purposes. Otherwise the valuation could not be increased beyond 10 per cent a year.

But as the judge observed, there was no limit set on the amount of residential land that could qualify for exemption and the legislation did not define land used for residential purposes.

The land had been in the family for more than 40 years and until about 10 years ago had been a nursery operated by the appellant's grandfather. It is used to provide privacy and solitude for the residence, but because the Assessment Appeal Board had found no activity of any kind upon it, the parcel failed to meet the residential qualification and was assessed for the 1974 taxation year at the higher value.

The Saanich appeal board asked Mr. Justice Wootton whether it erred in its interpretation, and the judge found it had.

"That purpose is a worthy one," he said referring to the privacy and solitude sought by the Hutchison family, "and is of the essence of residential qualification.

"How else will the owners prevent the development of their acreage with the resultant smaller subdivision of the land and the construction of buildings residential and perhap otherwise that will back upon the dwelling house of the family?

"How otherwise will they prevent the sounds of traffic disturbing their right to quiet?" wrote the justice in his reasons for the judgment.

Saanich had argued that to qualify for residential use, the land should have something like badminton courts, auxiliary structures or garden upon it.

But Wootton ruled the word "used" must be interpreted in the sense of "treat or treated."

Also, he said, the opposite interpretation results in an increase in taxation and he cited precedents in law which lean away from any interpretation that places a burden on the subject unless the intent of the legislature is clearly to impose a tax.

FISHERMEN'S STRIKE PLAN INCLUDES SELLING SALMON

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union plans to process and sell salmon itself during a strike it has called for July 25.

Bruce Yorke, who is managing the strike plan for the union, said, "The sale will start Aug. 1 and we hope to handle 500,000 pounds of fish during the first week."

Yorke said the union has obtained several plants in the Vancouver area where the fish will be dressed.

"What is not sold in Greater Vancouver will be transported by a fleet of reefer (refrigerated) trucks to other outlets in B.C., the Prairies and Eastern Canada," he said.

Sockeye salmon, dressing at six pounds, will sell for $6 a fish, Yorke said.

"The sale will also show the public that it is the fishing monopolies that are responsible for the inflation in fish prices, not the fishermen, tendermen or shoreworkers," he said.

The union represents 7,000 workers and net fishermen. The fishermen are seeking 80 cents a pound for sockeye salmon and have been offered 52 cents. Tendermen want an increase of $30 a day to their current $65 daily and shoreworkers want an increase of $2 an hour on their base rate of $4.76.

Talks between the union and the British Columbia Fisheries Association broke off Monday.

Vancouver Area 'Wants Subway'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Most Greater Vacnouver area municipalities oppose any plans the Greater Vancouver Regional District (GVRD) might have to develop rapid transit with its own resources, Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer said Thursday.

"What they want is a subway in downtown Vancouver;" said Lorimer.

"That's very nice, but not at the expense of everyone else. They're not going to get it."

He said he didn't believe the GVRD has sufficient financial resources of its own to carry out a rapid transit program.

The minister said subways for downtown Vancouver are about five years in the future and even then could be phased in after the light rapid transit systems now being developed are established. The systems primarily consist of streetcars.

Lorimer said a demonstration of light rapid transit will be set up next year, probably between Burnaby and New Westminster.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A motion by the Attorney-General's department that would have forced B.C. Telephone Co. to prove its interim rate-increase application is not the result of inflated equipment pricing was rejected Thursday at a Canadian Transport Commission hearing.

Commission vice-president Guy Roberge said the motion did not apply to the application.

It was the first day of hearings into an application by B.C. Tel for an interim rate increase of 10 per cent, effective July 1.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two submarine cables are being prepared to cross the Strait of Georgia and Trincomali Channel to provide Vancouver Island with an additional 475,000 kilowatts of electrical power.

The two double cables arrived Monday from Pirelli Cables Ltd. plant in Italy, which received the $13 million contract from B.C. Hydro in 1973 for supply and installation of the cables. Submarine type land cable to complete the link was manufactured at Pirelli's St. Jean, Que., plant.

The cable will cross 16 miles from Roberts Bank, south of Vancouver to Galiano Island and about 2.5 miles from Galiano Island across Trincomali Channel to Salt Spring Island and then connect by overhead cable to B.C. Hydro's terminal near Duncan.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eileen Dailly, B.C. minister of education, said Thursday she plans to examine all curricula in the province to see that areas that have "been left notoriously blank concerning the conribution of women" can be changed.

Dailly, who was addressing the World YWCA Council meeting at the University of B.C., said in the meantime she was hopeful revisions now being made to a proposed women's studies course for secondary schools could be approved by her office. The course would be offered to school districts as a model for elective courses.

SURREY (CP) — Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said Thursday he is asking the B.C. government to give its Surrey refinery site to the municipality or go into partnership with the local government in developing an industrial park here.

The B.C. government abandoned the idea of building its proposed oil refinery on the site after the municipal council voted against it earlier this week.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Medical Association has asked its negotiating committee to reopen talks with the Workers Compensation Board in an attempt to reach agreement on a new contract, an association spokesman said Thursday.

The association announced June 30 that a mailed referendum showed 1,367 doctors rejected the latest contract proposal, while 322 voted acceptance.

Choppy Seas Defeat Channel Swimmer

FOLKESTONE, England (CP) — Cindy Nicholas, 17-year-old marathon swimmer from Toronto, was pulled from the waters of the English Channel because of choppy seas less than four hours after starting her swim early today.

Miss Nicholas had completed about seven miles of the 21-mile cross-Channel swim from England to France when she and her handlers decided to call off the attempt.

She said she was a bit disappointed because it was the first time she had failed to complete a marathon swim but she added that she found it an exciting challenge and would try again in a few days.

The sun-bronzed Toronto schoolgirl still hopes to beat the women's record of nine hours, 36 minutes established on Aug. 10, 1973, by Lynne Cox, a 16-year-old from Los Alamitos, Calif.

The sea was calm earlier in the morning but began to get choppy soon after she started and the sky was overcast.

Rocks' Skip Best

NEW WESTMINSTER — Victoria Shamrocks kept their first-place hopes alive in the Western Lacrosse Association Thursday with a 14-9 victory over New Westminster Salmonbellies.

The Salmonbellies lead the league with 32 points while the third-place Irish have 26 points but have two games in hand. The big game will be Wednesday when the two clubs meet at Memorial Arena.

Should the Shamrocks win that one and their other three remaining games, they will take first place by virture of their superior won-loss record over New Westminster.

And should that occur, it will be the first time since 1957 that Victoria has finished on top in the WLA.

The main difference in Thursday's game was between goalies Skip Jolly of New Westminster and Skip Chapman of Victoria.

Both played well in the first period as the Salmonbellies took a 4-3 lead.

The second period, however, was another story as Jolly was victimized by long shots and Chapman played brilliantly. The Irish held an 8-6 lead going into the final 20 minutes.

Jolly didn't improve in the third period as the Shamrocks beat him on six of 13 shots.

Chapman, though, saved his best for last as he blocked 14 of 17 shots and shut out the Salmonbellies for the final 11 minutes and 37 seconds.

Dennis Somner had his most productive game of the season for the Shamrocks with three goals, all in the final period. His first goal at 10:06 proved to be the winner.

Jeevan Dillon and Pete Rushton also fired three goals each for the Irish while Mike Beaulack had two. Jim Browne, Charn Dhillon and junior "B" recruit Tej Labh, with his first WLA goal, had the other Victoria markers.

Bob Tasker led New Westminster with two goals and three assists while Paul Parnell and Bill Mosdell also scored twice each. Larry Henry, Rick Kennedy and league scoring leader Wayne Goss had one apiece.

Harris Sparks Lions In Win Over Bombers

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions, trailing by 12 points midway through the third quarter, rallied to beat Winnipeg Blue Bombers 30-19 in a Western Football Conference exhibition game in the rain Thursday night before 14,092 fans.

Lions turned to Lou Harris, their bread-and-butter running back, to help them pull the game out and he didn't let them down. He scored two third-quarter touchdowns and set up a field goal in the fourth quarter.

The two teams meet again next week in their regular-season openers in Winnipeg and it's evident Bombers will have to find a way to stop Harris—Lions' leading rusher last year—if they are to have better success.

Bob Macorriti's field goal from 32 yards out gave Bombers a 3-0 lead after the first quarter. He kicked two more in the second quarter before the Lions got on the boards with Don Moorhead's 14-yard touchdown pass to Tony Moro which John Wintermeyer converted.

But the visitors didn't take long to make up for Moro's touchdown. Paul Williams found an open route on the sidelines and ran the ensuing kickoff back 81 yards to the B.C. 13 where Joe Fourquerean's desperation tackle stopped him.

A few plays later fullback Steve Beaird scored on a one-yard run and Macorriti converted to give Bombers their 16-7 halftime lead.

Bombers opened third-quarter scoring with another Macorriti field goal but Winnipeg's kicking game faltered later in the quarter when B.C. linebacker Lorne Watters blocked a Macorriti punt at the Bombers' 15-yard line.

Four minutes after that, Harris capped a B.C. march, taking Moorhead's screen pass to scamper 26 yards for a touchdown. Wintermeyer converted to put Lions ahead 20-19 going into the final quarter.

Wintermeyer kicked a fourth-quarter field goal then added a convert on Ross Clarkson's 46-yard touchdown on a pass from Ken Johnson.

Wayne Moseley, acquired by B.C. from Montreal Alouettes this week, turned in an impressive performance running back punts and kick-offs. His showing makes it likely that he will be kept for the regular season.

Moorhead completed six of the 16 passes he threw for 91 yards. Johnson was good on two of five for 53 yards.

Message for Bates: 'Have to Want to Win'

NOTES AND LIKE THAT . . . And no sooner does coach Joe Patterson of Bate say that his club is stronger than last year (Times, July 12) than the team does a double flip against North Vancouver Roadhouse Inn Vikings, losing twice after winning two from the stronger Vancouver Magicians the previous day. It probably was ever thus. Still, for the record, perhaps the club may be interested to know what sponsor Herb Bate, known in the trade as "a tough loser", has a personal philosophy. "You have to want to win," he says. "That is the difference between winning and losing." And this was mentioned before last weekend too, and after Bate's win in the Hull Invititional. Nuff said.

Scottish golfing fans may be the most knowledgable of all, as the TV announcer said during the British Open; but they are also among the canniest. With the Carnoustie course running along a roadside in one area, the course marshals had their problems with people on the inside sneaking their tickets to friends outside the boundary fence; and it was estimated that as many as 10 people were getting on the course for the price if one ticket. So the marshals began spot checks, only accepting pleas of lost badges if the spectator could show a piece of string still dangling from his buttonhole. But the culprite were one step ahead and responded by coming through the gate wearing bits of string. But no tickets!

What price a suspension? Jack Newton, the Australian finalist in the Open playoff against Tom Watson, is rather fortunate that he was allowed to play in the event. It seems Newton has been suspended by the Australian Professional Golfers' Association for conduct detrimental to the PGA, but the suspension was delayed until next Jan. 1, 12 months after the alleged offence, so that his tour schedule would not be affected.

WHAT THEY'RE SAYING: Houston McTear, the 18-year-old sensation who shares the world record of nine seconds for the 100-yard dash: It's not a question of if I break the record, but when."

So you don't think archery is fast becoming a major participation sport, eh? Well, according to the latest consumer survey by the U.S. National Sporting Goods Association, Americans in 1974 spent 27 per cent more on archery equipment than in 1973 . . . If that was second in the nation, tennis was the leader with a 48 per cent increase over 1973. The survey, projected from reports of 32,000 families, also showed bowling, with a 26 per cent increase, skiing up 25 per cent and overall people spending more than even on athletic equipment despite the economic downturn. And where does Canada rank in world archery? Better than most. The women are fourth and the men sixth. That's where they finished among 140 nations in the recent world championship.

And speaking of horse racing, it was indeed a tragic sight seeing Ruffian break down in the celebrated match race against Foolish Pleasure. And, understandably, now the rumor mill grinds out the story that Ruffian wasn't right for the race and perhaps shouldn't have run. Well, so be it. But one horse that was asked originally and didn't run was Master Derby, the Preakness winner. And the story is that the trainer of Foolish Pleasure wanted nothing to do with Master Derby who, incidentally, got $50,000 for NOT running . . . And do you know what a parlay is? It's a system where you keep betting until you lose.

And further, I liked Carrol McBride's story in the Racing Form about the horseplayer who wagered his last $10 on a speedball, then called skyward as his horse broke on top. "Oh Lord, please keep him in front for me." They'd run a quarter and the horse had moved five in front. "Please, Lord, give this horse a helping hand," cried the punter. On the turn the horse had pulled in front by eight. "Lord, this horse needs you now!" With less than an eighth to run the horse had stretched his margin to 10 lengths. Lowering his glasses and looking to the heavens once more, the horseplayer said: "Okay, Lord, I'll take over from here."

Meanwhile, Gorde Hunter has received tentative assurance from race driver Rodger Ward that he will attend next spring's annual Sportsmen's Awards Dinner. And that has to be a plus.

Boxla Loop Trims Slate

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — The six-team National Lacrosse League has decided to cut the current playing schedule for each club by eight games, league president Gerry Patterson announced Thursday at the conclusion of the league's two-day semi-annual meeting.

The original 56-game schedule will be modified so that each club plays 48 games, thus allowing the Nations' Cup playoffs to begin during the first week of September.

"I made the recommendation that we shorten our schedule by eight games and conclude the regular season by the end of August and the board of governors supported my suggestions unanimously," Patterson said.

The playoffs will pair the No. 1 and No. 4 finishers in regular-season play and the No. 2 and No. 3 finishers in best-of-seven final.

The 1975 season began April 12, compared with May 14 in 1974 — the league's initial year of operation. Each club played a 40-game schedule last year.

Patterson said that in retrospect it was felt the league started its schedule too early this year. He said the league will compress its future playing schedules beginning next year.

In Thursday's only game, Long Island Tomahawks came from behind to defeat Montreal Quebecois, 14-10, at Uniondale, N.Y.

B.C. Girls in Final

RICHMOND (CP) — Upsets by Flo McFall and Lorna McPherson Thursday gave the Pacific Northwest Golf Association its first all-B.C. women's championship final in 46 years.

Miss McFall scored a well-earned 2-and-1 victory over 1973 tournament champion Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver. Miss McPherson birdied the last hole to stop Linda Bellar, the tournament medalist from Redmonds, Wash.

Miss McFall, who plays at Quilchena in this municipality south of Vancouver, and Miss McPherson, a six-handicapper at Vancouver Point Grey, meet in the 36-hole final today.

Meanwhile, three Seattle players and Bob Mitchell of the host Quilchena course reached the men's semi-finals after two rounds of play Thursday.

Johnson started the day with a 4-and-3 win over Steve Berry of Vancouver and then stopped Bob Burton of Everett, Wash., 5-and-3. Burton had knocked out George's brother, Ed Jonson, the defending champion, in the morning round at the 20th hole.

Mitchell advanced with a two-up victory over Craig Matson of Seattle and a one-up decision over John Theilade of Tacoma. Matson had earlier beaten Ron Speidel of Seattle, 2 and 1.

Nilles eliminated tournament-medalist Mike Gove of Seattle, 3-and-2, and then took his quarter-final match, 5-and-4, over Vancouver left-hander Butch Reimer. Reimer had beaten Jeff Gwinn of Seattle, two-up.

Brannen scored a one-up verdict over Muncie Booth of Vancouver, after having disposed of Everett's Doug Lauer, two-up.

JOINS HORNETS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Chris Kupec, North Carolina's record-setting quarterback, has signed a contract with Charlotte Hornets of the World Football League.

Curl 5-Under

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Rod Curl fired a five-under-par 66 for the first-round lead Thursday in the $200,000 Pleasant Valley golf tournament.

Curl, who scored his lone tour triumph in the Colonial National in Fort Worth, Tex., last year, did not make a bogey in his effort over the hilly, 7119-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club course.

He held a one-stroke lead over veteran Miller Barber, who climbed out of a hospital bed to shoot a 67 with a birdie on the final hole.

Heading a group at 68, just two shots back, was Lee Elder. Also at 68 were Chuck Courtney and Eddie Pearce.

RANKIN HAS LEAD

NORTHFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Judy Rankin lost four strokes to par Thursday after five holes but rallied for an even-par 72 to lead the first round of the 30th annual U.S. Women's Open golf tournament by one stroke.

Mrs. Rankin leads the four-day, 72-hole test over the Atlantic City Country Club course by one stroke over Joanne Carner, Judy Kimball and amateur Nancy Lopez, each with 73.

EIGHT RUTH SQUADS IN SIDNEY TOURNEY

Eight teams, including Saanich Evening Optimists and host Sidney, will battle through a double-loss elimination tournament for the B.C. 14- and 15-year-old Babe Ruth baseball championship starting Saturday at Sanscha Park.

Play continues through the week with the final scheduled for Friday.

No-Hit Effort

Bull tossed a no-hitter, striking out 16, and belted a three-run home run in the fourth inning to help eliminate Gordon Head from the double-loss tournament.

Burien Squeezes Past Carnarvon

A successful squeeze play in the eighth inning gave Burien, Wash., a 5-4 decision over the host club in the Carnarvon Pony League rookie baseball tournament for 13-year-olds Thursday at Carnarvon Park.

Dennis Fite opened the eighth inning with a double and advanced to third base on a sacrifice. He then scored the winning run on a bunt single by Charlie Egan.

The win boosted Burien into the winners' bracket semi-finals of the five-team, double-knockout tournament. The U.S. club will meet the winner of a game this morning between North Vancouver Capilanos and Layritz on Saturday.

Layritz got two-hit pitching from Ron Sharpe and edged West Vancouver 4-2 in another Thursday contest.

Krimmer Aids Farmer Win

Farmer Construction moved to within one game of leading Gorge Hotel by nipping Greaves Movers 6-5 Thursday in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Wayne Krimmer helped the win by pitching his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh inning after relieving starter Terry Painter.

TRADE APPROVED

COQUITLAM — Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League commissioner Wally Donaldson announced Thursday he has approved a trade Monday which sent Gary Holte from Coquitlam Adanacs to New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Donaldson made his decision after a telephone conference with the league's five general managers.

Victoria McDonalds' GM Bob Reid had protested the deal, saying it violated a Canadian Lacrosse Associton bylaw that stipulated a player can't be transferred after July 1.

But the CLA rule applies only in the absence of a league transfer rule and the Western Canada League, in its operating charter, allows transfer of players until July 13.

Cosmos Walk to Final

Lack of control by opposing pitchers helped Gordon Head Cosmopolitans to an 11-3 decision over Sidney in a Lower Island 13-year-old Babe Ruth baseball championship tournament game Thursday at Reynolds Road Park.

Despite getting only four hits, Cosmos took prompt advantage of 17 bases on balls to gain the victory and a berth in the championship final at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

Sidney and Saanich Evening Optimists meet in a losers' bracket game at 6:30 tonight for the other berth in the final.

Gordon Head 342 002—11 4 1
Sidney 000 003— 3 1 1

Duncan Ousted

LAKE COWICHAN — Richie Enns tossed a no-hitter Thursday to spark Campbell River to a 7-0 triumph over Duncan in a losers' bracket game in the District Seven Little League baseball championships.

Enns struck out five and walked three, while Dean Casorzo led the Campbell River attack with a two-run home run.

The loss eliminated Duncan from the double-knockout tournament, while the win lifted Campbell River into a contest tonight against Stewart Channel (Crofton, Chemainus and Saltspring Island).

Winner of that game will advace to the championship final Saturday against unbeaten Nanaimo.

Cowichan River Fishing Gradually Deteriorating

Maurice Wrixon, a fly-fishing purist who has roamed the Cowichan River each summer for the past 27 years, is abandoning his favorite haunts.

Not completely, mind you. With the faith that springs eternal in all anglers, he hopes things will be better in the fall.

Maurice and Carol McKinnon, an accomplished fisherwoman who learned the art from him, flogged the section upstream from the trestle bridge for six solid hours last Friday without "a single bite."

And that was under near-ideal water conditions for tying into one of those large and wily brown trout.

In two recent letters to recreation and conservation minister Jack Radford, Maurice expressed his concern about conditions in the stream.

"This is my last appeal to you to take some action with regard to the fast deterioration of fishing in the Cowichan River . . . During the last five years especially, the river has gone down and down . . ."

"If you do not believe me, make some inquiries of others who have fished the river for many years," he added. "There are many others with wide experience on the river who will not even bother to go up there now."

This list of anglers includes Jim Hatter, head of the fish and wildlife branch, "who used to fish the river regularly . . ."

In the letters, Maurice brings up three good points that merit consideration.

"The Cowichan River is 29 miles long and I strongly urge the top four miles from Skutz Falls to the lake should be reserved for fly-fishing only. The section below Skutz Falls could remain open for hardware, worm, salmon roe and any other type of bait fishing."

He also says enforcement of the fishing regulations should be stepped up.

In those 27 years he has fished the Cowichan, Maurice hasn't been stopped once for a licence or catch check by a conservation officer.

"I have seen fishermen throw a fish into the bushes when they catch a slightly larger fish in order to keep within the four-fish limit," he explained.

★ ★ ★

And his last suggestion:

"Fishing should not be permitted on any river or lake in B.C. one hour after sundown. This is a regulation which prevails in all civilized countries as far as I know."

Instituting such a regulation would eliminate the present summer-time practice of fishing for brown trout with a large white fly at night.

Although I don't think we have to be overly worried about the prospects of trout disappearing from the Cowichan system, the quality of fishing experience available in the future will probably deteriorate further.

George Reid, the Island's regional fisheries biologist, told me this spring that the Cowichan system had been earmarked for some special attention within the next five years. By December of this year, the first draft of a Cowichan watershed plan coupled with a specific brown trout enhancement study should be drawn up.

Implementation of the plan and further evaluations should continue through the succeeding years.

But, considering the pace at which residential develop is springing up along the river, those evaluations will have to be made quite often.

Even now, the village of Lake Cowichan is in the process of installing sewer lines and the river has been discolored by runoff water from the excavations.

And more residential developments is sure to aggravate the access problems which have arisen over the years.

So, in the final analysis, Maurice's suggestions might not make that much difference unless they are implemented hand - in - hand with some realistic planning.

Finley's Tune Not for Kuhn

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The vote was 22 to 2, but it was the closest 22-to-2 vote you'll ever see.

By virtue of baseball's sometimes mysterious bylaws, Bowie Kuhn came perilously close to being ousted as commissioner Thursday even though a vast majority of the owners were satisfied with the job he has done since taking office in February, 1969.

The quirk was the rule that requires the commissioner to have a minimum of nine votes in each league. Kuhn had that and more in the National League where his support was led by Walter O'Malley of Los Angeles Dodgers. But he had only eight votes in the American, one short of the number he needed for re-election.

As it turned out, it was a good thing for Kuhn that the AL opposition surfaced when it did. The AL vote was unofficial— more a feeling-out to see what the sentiment of the owners was.

Had the matter not come up in that manner, a formal vote might have been called at the joint meeting, before Kuhn's supporters had time to change any minds. And if the first vote taken had been a formal one, Kuhn would be on his way back to Wall Street today instead of enjoying the security of a new seven-year contract as commissioner.

When it learned of the AL sentiment, the NL owners asked if the American League would reconsider the matter and vote again. The request was refused. The AL indicated its mind was made up. The owners would, however, agree to table the matter since no decision really had to be made until next February, six months before the expiration of Kuhn's first term.

But Kuhn wouldn't sit still for that. The commissioner said he would have resigned had the owners moved in that direction.

Then the backroom bargaining began. The minds of the New York and Texas clubs changed. Overnight, the four negative votes were reduced to two and the formal vote the NL had feared 12 hours earlier could be used to re-elect the commissioner instead of disposing of him.

Oakland owner Charles O. Finley had two angry exchanges with Kuhn after the vote. The first came when the commissioner thanked the owners for their support and made a remark about "the quality of the opposition."

Later, Kuhn virtually ordered Finley to leave a conference room where the commissioner was meeting with reporters. The two exchanges indicated that despite Kuhn's new pact, there will be no peace between Finley and the commissioner.

SYDNEY RALLIES

FEDERAL WAY, Wash.—Defending-champion Sydney Thomson of Victoria was playing Patty Curtiss of Tacoma over 18 holes today to decide the Pacific Northwest Golf Association junior women's championship.

Miss Thomson advanced to the final by scoring a 3-and-1 win Thursday over Susan Jacobsen of Portland.

Miss Curtiss won on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff against Nancy Peck in Thursday's other semi-final.

One down after nine holes, Miss Thomson rallied with wins on the 10th, 12th, 13th, 15th and 17th holes. The only hole she lost on the back nine was the 14th.

Neither the defending champion nor Miss Jacobsen was in top form on the 5,084-yard Twin Lakes course. Miss Thomson had a seven-over par 43 for the first nine while Miss Jacobsen had a 42. The Victoria competitor, though, was only two over for the final eight holes while her opponent was six over.

You cover a lot of territory — both liquid and solid — when you start earning your spurs in the sailing game.

JEFF McBRIDE

Two weeks ago he was in Gimli, Man., to crew for clubmate Tim Roots in the 1975 Canadian Yachting Association Sail Canada Youth Championships.

Tim and Jeff came tenth. Had they come higher they would have made the Canadian team that will race at the International Yacht Racing Union's world championships in Scotland.

Last weekend Jeff was in Vancouver with Julian Thornton as crew, racing in the B.C. Sailing Association's 16 years-and-under two-man Junior Olympics at the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

He'll be back again at Royal Van. Aug. 1-4 because he and Julian placed third and thereby won a place on B.C.'s team for the Western Canadians, which will be raced then.

Jeff will never be superstitious. In the last race, sailed on the 13th, he drew boat 13 and yet came second, cinching a berth on the provincial team.

Ian and Jay Fraser (they're not related) of the West Vancouver Yacht Club won the provincial sailoff. Tom Macdonald and Bruce Clark of Royal Van. came second.

As soon as the prizegiving was over, Jeff was on his way again; this time to Seattle to race in the family Thunderbird, Lemolo, with Dad, Rod, and brothers Rick and Andrew.

Lemolo is one of 10 Thunderbirds racing in the Thunderbird world championships which has drawn entries from as far away as Australia. Racing began Monday and ends today.

Thanks to their prowess in Fireballs, a husband and wife team from the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, are also in for some travelling.

Dennis and Bobbie Carlow have been selected to race in 470 competition at the Western Canadian Games, to be held in Regina Aug. 11-15 and have been asked to race in the Fireball world championships, which take place at Halifax in 1976.

They placed third in both the Pacific International Yacht Racing Union's dinghy regatta and the Canadian Fireball Nationals, held on the mainland this month. Clubmates Grant Davis and Peter McKinnon came sixth in the PIYA event but had to settle for a 10th in the CFN five-race series.

RVYC has another around-Discovery Island reverse handicap race scheduled for Saturday. The first boats will get their gun at 1 p.m.

The club's annual picnic takes place the next day on Chatham Islands, boats leaving the yacht club shortly after noon. As usual, genial foreshoreman 'Big Ed' will supervise the salmon barbecue which is guaranteed to be a tastebud-teaser.

Dodgers Drop Ball

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles Dodgers suddenly found themselves with the opportunity Thursday of making at least a small dent in Cincinnati Reds' 12½-game lead in the National League West Division, but the Dodgers dropped the ball.

The Reds ended a 10-game winning streak with a 3-0 loss to Montreal Expos while the Dodgers lost 5-2 to Pittsburgh Pirates who retained their 6½-game edge over Philadelphia Phillies in the East.

The Phillies beat Houston Astros 6-5 in 11 innings, New York Mets defeated Atlanta Braves 4-3, St. Louis Cardinals defeated San Francisco Giants 1-0 and Chicago Cubs edged San Diego Padres.

The Dodgers were victims of the Pirates' long-ball hitters. Dave Parker's two home runs and Willie Stargell's solo shot, all off Andy Messersmith, gave Pittsburgh its sixth victory in the last seven games.

Parker hit his first of the game in the second inning, Rennie Stennett singled home a run in the third, Stargell unloaded his 18th in the sixth, then Stargell walked and Parker hit his 17th of the year in the eighth. John Hale's sacrifice fly and single drove in both Los Angeles runs against Bruce Kison.

Montreal's Pepe Mangual and Pete Mackanin hit homers while Steve Rogers and Dale Murray baffled the Reds on seven hits.

Rogers checked the Reds on five hits and struck out seven before leaving the game with a blister on his pitching hand. Jack Billingham gave up only six hits in six innings but two of them were the homers by Mangual leading off the bottom of the first and by Mackanin with one out in the fifth. The Expos' other run came in the sixth on a single by Larry Parrish.

Clickety-Click

Victoria abounds with scenes for the shutterbug and the Inner Harbor rim has more than its share —of both. From any vantage point, out-of-town folks can focus on the pompous Empress or the stately seat of government. Tilted up, a camera catches hanging flower baskets, or down, a mall taking shape on construction-cluttered Government St. A quick pan with a movie camera might even pick up a fleeing fugitive, but only on a rare occasion. Bobbing yachts and two-tier buses, ferries and more flowers—the list is endless. Is it worth the effort? Only the friends back home know for sure.

Eviction Dispute At Centre

Tenants in a private Victoria low-income housing project will be evicted under new rental policy there, says a resident — but the centre's board director insists tenants were never supposed to stay long.

Single parents at the Bishop Cridge Centre for the Family received a written rental policy one week ago that said any parent earning more than social assistance rates plus $100 per month had to leave.

"The policy was an intent to evice some of us," said Marie Hewison, a mother living there.

"There's supposed to be a reasonable turnover," said director Dr. Archie Gray. "We're trying to help parents over the hump (of financial difficulty) until they become self-sufficient.

"There are those who have found this a cosy little nest and feel they can live here for the rest of their lives,' 'said Gray.

"Some claim they were told they could by former administration. Whether they were or not, that was never our intent."

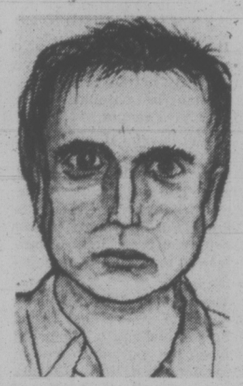
Gray said a three-year time period will now be put on each tenant after which his financial situation will be assessed for the centre to see whether he can move out on his own.

According to Hewison, income ceilings established by the policy won't encourage parents to train for jobs because they'll have to move to regular apartments once they get those jobs.

Apartments don't supply the daycare Bishop Cridge does, and jobs often don't supply the free medical care social assistance does, she said.

A meeting of tenants held Thursday night attracted most of the 29 living there.

The centre has operated as a non-profit non-denominational project helping families since 1969.



IF YOU'VE SEEN a man resembling this composite drawing, contact city police at 384-4111. The drawing was released by police in an effort to find the man who robbed the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Government and Yates on Wednesday. He's described as five feet, three inches tall, aged 30 to 35, medium build and with a pockmarked or pimply face and black stringy hair.

'TOOK ONE CHANCE TOO MANY'

Deputies to Be Disciplined For Letting Cain Get Away

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Disciplinary action will "have to be taken" against the three deputy sheriffs officers escorting Danny Cain when he escaped Thursday morning, Geoffrey Mortimer, head of the B.C. Sheriffs Service, said today.

"This sort of thing can't be condoned," Mortimer said without indicating what action will be taken against deputies Brian McClelland, John French, and Joseph Rivard, who were assigned to escort the 19-year-old youth back to B.C. Penitentiary.

"As they are civil servants there are limitations in what we can do," Mortimer said. "We are looking at the full spectrum of options. But if we suspend them, we are so short-staffed, we would not only be punishing them but ourselves too."

He said the deputies, who had escorted Cain on four previous occasions without incident, "took one chance too many."

Although the sheriff service regulations point out prisoners are "human beings and should be treated as such", the regulations also specify extra precautionary measures should be taken in exceptional cases.

Leg irons, waist chains and straight jackets are all available if the occasion warrants.

"I believe compassion and complacency were the two things that steered the officers head in this instance rather than the concern for security or safety of the public."

Mortimer said his men had not anticipated trouble, feeling there was sufficient security in numbers—three against one.

He said the deputies had handcuffed Cain with his hands in front rather than behind his back as that would have been too "uncomfortable" for the youth. They hadn't used leg irons because it would have posed problems in getting Cain on the plane.

Cain, flanked by French and Rivard with McLelland behind, suddenly bolted as the four approached the ramp leading to the Air West float in the Inner Harbor at 11:35 a.m.

Victoria police inspector Richard Ward said Cain faked running forward then abruptly turned, gave one guard a body block and "took off running like a rabbit" across a parking lot, up a grassy bank to Belleville Street.

"Our men must have been terribly complacent and careless," Mortimer said. "But what concerns me is they either froze in their tracks or expected the other guy to do the fast running — or are just in lousy shape."

He said only one of the deputies, McLelland, was armed but there were conflicting reports whether he took out his gun.

MORTIMER
". . . can't be condoned"

"I hope he didn't," Mortimer said. "The men have been instructed not to use their weapons except in cases where someone's life is in jeopardy."

While McLelland phoned for help Rivard and French ran after Cain and saw him dart into the Swiftsure Inn across the street.

An intensive search of the area was mounted and Cain was found within half an hour by Victoria detective Doug Richardson and Swiftsure head housekeeper Pearl O'Neil who spotted him hiding under a bed in room 104.

He submitted without struggle.

"Can I have a cigarette?" he asked Richardson who ironically was the same officer who discovered him in a duplex at 1166 Summit on Tuesday where Cain had been hiding out since his escape from Wilkinson Road jail Sunday.

Cain was returned to the Victoria police lockup by 12:15 p.m. and appeared in provincial court that afternoon charged with escaping lawful custody.

As in the case of the 14 other criminal charges the youth is now facing, he elected trial by judge alone and waived the right to preliminary hearing.

At 9:10 a.m. today he was put on a special-charter plane and returned without incident to the B.C. Penitentiary where he will remain until his trial comes before Victoria county court this fall.

Mortimer said three other deputies were assigned the task of escorting him.

'Quiet Move' Into Cafe On Harbor

The provincial government sidewalk cafe on the Causeway should be serving sandwiches and cold drinks within two weeks, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said today.

Although there has been "one roadblock after another," in setting up the controversial eating establishment in the former Causeway Esso station, Hartley said refurbishing estimated at less than $10,000 is going smoothly.

"We are moving in quietly with a minimum of costs," the minister said, adding the provincial government would have liked to have been granted a trade licence from Victoria city council.

"We wanted to cooperate," but the application — which the provincial government is not compelled to make—has been held up pending determination of whether the purpose fits land uses envisaged by Capital Improvement District Commission. A meeting of CIDC has been set for Thursday.

The menu will include sandwiches, cold drinks, tea and coffee and is under the management of a legislative dining room chef, Yvon Chouinard.

Solidarity Picketing Cancelled

A "solidarity picket" planned by striking Insurance Corporation of B.C. employees for Monday at the Legislative Buildings has been cancelled, a union spokesman said today.

Wayne Koski of the Office and Technical Employees Union, said the demonstration by OTEU members and other supporters in the trade union movement is being held in abeyance pending the outcome of negotiations now being held in Vancouver.

The Victoria Labor Council had earlier voted to support the demonstration.

Apartments? Forget It!

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The supply of two and three-bedroom apartments for rent in the Victoria area has just about dried up, according to a survey by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation released today.

The survey showed the vacancy rate for two-bedroom apartments had fallen to 0.2 per cent the lowest level since the survey began in 1972, while the supply of three-bedroom apartments had fallen to nil, down from 0.6 per cent in December.

Ray Pitt, assistant manager of the Victoria CMHC office, said the decline in two-bedroom apartments was particularly troublesome.

He said this type of accommodation is in high demand because it enables young people to share an apartment and split the expenses. More affluent couples who only need one bedroom also are looking for two-bedroom apartments so they can have additional living space.

Pitt said there was little hope of improvement in the vacancy rate until 1976, when apartments under construction become available.

★ ★ ★

The over-all vacancy rate in Victoria is 0.3 per cent, making this area one of the four lowest in Canada. Lowest vacancy rate was Regina at 0.1 per cent, with Vancouver and Saskatoon tied at second-lowest with 0.2 per cent.

The Victoria vacancy rate had been 0.1 per cent in December and 0.7 per cent last June. The vacancy rate tends to be very low in December.

To avoid the misleading effects of seasonal fluctuations, CMHC has begun conducting its surveys in April and October. The latest figures are for April of this year.

While the over-all vacancy rate for the area for all sizes of apartments is 0.3 per cent, it is 0.1 per cent in Saanich, 0.5 per cent in Esquimalt, 0.3 per cent in Victoria City and nil in Oak Bay and View Royal.

The only relatively bright spot in the report is the increased availability of bachelor suites. The vacancy rate has risen to 0.6 per cent from 0.1 per cent in December. However, it had been a full one per cent last June.

The vacancy rate for one-bedroom suites was 0.2 per cent up from 0.1 per cent in December but below last June's rate of 0.4 per cent.

189 Off Job At Dockyard

A total of 189 civilian workers at HMC Dockyard in Esquimalt were off the job today as the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council's series of rotating strikes enters its seventh week.

Refit operations at the yard have been closed since the strike began June 5.

The Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, which covers workers in the Esquimalt and Halifax naval dockyards, has been negotiating with the federal treasury board for a new contract since March.

What's That Out There, a Dorsal Fin?

ONE RECENT LONG and heavenly evening, I waded into a saltchuck reach between creek mouths to try for a breakfast trout. But imagination abetted by memory ruined my chances. Suppose that oddly-shaped object riding the tide wasn't driftwood? What if it were a dorsal fin attached to a ravening appetite?

This was ridiculous. Our Gulf of Georgia marine population doesn't run to man-eating sharks. Still, anyone who has seen Jaws, the suspenseful excursion into terror currently breaking movie-house box office records, may understand my retreat to ankle-deep water.

Win and I caught the film in Vancouver. We were strolling Granville Street with time on our hands when we came up against the tail of an impressive lineup. We tagged along. Presently Jaws engulfed us.

An hour or so later — one victim down and the great white shark that besets a New England shore community lining up its next human snack — the fellow beside me leaned to his companion.

"Jeez," he muttered, "I shouldn't have ordered that steak rare!"

But horror alone no longer packs theatres. Laid on for its own sake, gore-and-guts becomes boring. Audiences are hardened to it. Eventually, it crowds melodrama into the realm of snicker-provoking farce.

The fact that Jaws escapes this fate suggests that the film has much more than horror going for it.

As a tale-spinner by trade, I found the why of the film's phenomenal success almost as engrossing as its scenes. What are the ingredients that turn an uncomplicated, undersexed adventure story into a spectacular film success?

First, there's the basic situation. A clever writer can work wonders with a shaky story situation, but the end result is rarely memorable.

In the case of Jaws, the auctorial impulse visited the author with what every writer hopes for. This is an idea from which he can evolve a plot sturdy enough to go the course without lag, sag, or the wheels-in-air landing that occurs when a story runs out of fuel prematurely.

A redhot idea framed into a strong plot fleshed out with competent characters makes for a highly-readable piece of fiction. For film purposes, however, those elements aren't sufficient. Witness the fate of many a good story that has curled up and died during the transfer from printed page to screen.

The catalyst is the director. And the directing that went into Jaws is most devilishly effective.

The electronic shark is a triumph of ingenuity, but Disney Studios have achieved monsters no less convincing.

The situation — man against man-eater — is old as the craft of story-telling. We've been exposed to it any number of times. There were the demoniac lions of Tsavo, predators that brought construction to a halt on an African railway line, and Jim Corbett's tigers with their fantastic tally of natives paunched.

Suspense is melodrama's handmaiden. Movie-goers are hardened to it. To stiffen us in our seats and curl our toes, something special in way of suspense is required.

The director's gimmick in this picture is to pull the trigger on each charge of suspense either before the viewer is quite braced for the explosion, or at the precise point when his expectations have relaxed.

Jaws isn't a great picture. But as a spine-tingler, its impact was sufficient to give me that attack of the nervous sillies a couple of evenings later in the shallows of our home bay.

Man-eaters in B.C. coast waters? Nonsense! It couldn't happen here. I said as much to a federal fisheries man, who considered for a moment with an odd little smile. Then he told me about two hams that spoiled in storage during a fisheries research cruise in Queen Charlotte Islands waters.

He carried the hams aft. He dropped one of them overside. It vanished in a surge and an enormous swirl. Then he dropped the other ham. It too disappeared into a maw that would encompass a barrel.

The fisheries man didn't know what the ham-snatcher was, though he did recall that a shark of the horrific breed which figures in Jaws was caught several years earlier near Rose Spit.

On one point, he entertained few doubts. If he'd chosen that moment to tumble overboard, he would probably have joined those hams.

Tables Turned at Jobberwocky Club

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — "I like to be in control, to have my own way," the lithe and tan brunette said.

Seated at the Jabberwockey Club's bar in a hip-hugging skirt and halter, Beverly Lujan looked as though she'd never have to worry about things being any other way.

But it was Monday night in the membership-only club — the one night of the week in this age of liberation when women scout the field and ask for the dances while the men play the waiting game.

It is also the night the Jabberwockey, billed as a "dazzling takeoff on Alice Through The Looking Glass," draws its largest crowd and does its best bar business.

It's a real trip," laughed Priscilla Ridder, a habitue of the club since it opened about two years ago. "You know they want to dance because they're doing what you do the other six nights.' "

That turned out to be sitting or standing in casual clusters of nonchalance at the bar or around the "marble" dance floor, trying to catch the eye or interest of any one of a score of women.

"You see some pretty dejected guys walk out of here at 2 a.m.," said membership salesman Gary Simas, who used the ladies' night gimmick to push club membership up over 1,000.

"This gives the guys a good insight into what it's like to be on the other side," Beverly said. "It's very healthy for women to have a chance to choose."

"You (men) can see how the shoe fits," added Priscilla. "Maybe it'll make you a little more courteous."

And maybe not. The evening also gives a guy the chance to exact the cruelest of punishments for those with sweaty palms and furtive eyes agonizing up enough courage to ask for a dance—turn the women down.

The club occupies the top floor of a hotel and is one of four in the country offering a dining room, piano bar, discoteque and private rooms for intimate entertainment, where rules require the door be left slightly ajar.

The Jabberwockey caters to what Simas described as an affluent elite.

"We don't like to sound exclusive, but we're definitely unique," he said.

Memberships fees range from $25 a year for women and $50 for men, to the $500 corporate memberships for five that provide 15 free room accommodations.

Trendy setting for "Sadie Hawkins" night is the chrome, foam and plastic discoteque in the "Jub Jub" Room. Garishly splashed with purples, reds and oranges, its mirrored ceilings and needlepoint lighting pulse to a throbbing, soulful sound.

Enforcement of the role reversal walks around in the form of a blond named Sharon Ruston, who acts as "sheriff."

The 28-year-old secretary ceremoniously "arrests" errant males who make the mistake of asking women to dance. Blowing her whistle, popping off a cap gun and with a vocal assist from the disc jockey, the culprit is trundled off to "jail."

Some men have been known to spend a good part of the night in the cardboard prison, with bars, waiting for a reprieve to arrive in the form of an invitation to dance.

"It gives a girl the chance to be aggressive, wihtout being forward," Sharon said. "And it's a nice way to choose who you want to dance with."

In the end, it remains a man's world, the club decided against offering the women's night more than once a week "because it would probably cut down the crowd."

Predators Blamed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Predators, severe winters and trophy-type hunters are responsible for the depletion of big game herds in Manitoba, says the Manitoba Indian Brotherhood.

The MIB, at a meeting of band chiefs and officers, also asked that bounties on wolves and coyotes be reinstated on a five-year trial basis, because the animals have been reducing calf crops.

CRACKDOWN ON PLAYPENS

OTTAWA (CP) — Tough new legislation for mesh playpens will face manufacturers within a month, says J. W. Black of the consumer affairs department product safety branch.

He said that two children have died and several have been injured in playpens because the mesh now used is too wide, allowing a child's hands, feet or buttons on their clothing to become tangled in the mesh.

Black said if the button is on a neck opening the child could strangle.

The deparment is also investigating baby rattles because small ones could choke a child. Suitable life jackets for children are also being studied because adult jackets can be dangerous if worn by children.

Back-to-Back Marriage

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Dear Abby: After 26 years of fairly good marriage with three self-sufficient children and a paid-for home, my wife and I sleep back to back—like two fireplace logs.

She rations her love as a "reward" for favors and withholds it as "punishment." And when it's given, which is seldom, it's with very little enthusiasm (an understatement).

After nearly a year of this treatment, I'm considering breaking my flawless record of a faithful marriage to seek attention elsewhere.

I don't see much difference between a wife who trades her love for personal gain and a lady of the evening who sells her favors for money. I consider myself a darn good husband. Time is running out.

DISGUSTED

Dear Disgusted: You're confusing sex with love. Love is a gift, not an obligation. Sex can be obtained at a price. Love cannot.

If you haven't discussed the state of your marriage with your wife, it's time you did. If you both want a better marriage, I recommend counseling. But if you're asking me for the green light to pursue the red light, I'm negative.

Dear Abby: I have written a letter to a very dear friend of mine, and my problem is I haven't the courage to send it. If you publish it, I am sure my friend will see it. Here it is:

My dear, dear friend:

How else can I say it? You make me sick! No matter how I try to avoid the smoke of your cigarette, it's there, irritating my eyes, my sinuses, and getting into my lungs.

After a few hours with you, I'm literally ill. Sometimes when you blow your smoke directly at me, I turn my head or try to "fan" it away with my hand. You offer a small apology and move your cigarette—but you never put it out!

Of course, my problem is that I am a coward. I like you too much to tell you to your face that you are selfish. I don't want to hurt your feelings, yet you go on hurting mine.

Do you know that your breath is always bad? And no amount of perfume can mask the smell of stale smoke that's constantly on your hands, clothing and hair.

I love your company. Your sense of humor is priceless, and you've demonstrated your friendship to me many times. Yet, my doctor has told me I must avoid you. Can you believe it? Your smoking is making me ill. I miss you.

Smoked Out

Dear Abby: We recently received an invitation to a golden wedding celebration. At the bottom was printed: "Your presence—no presents—is requested."

Wasn't that a lovely way to say, "No gifts, please"?

Mrs. J.G.

Dear Mrs. G.: Yes. Thanks for sharing.

Welch Medical Report

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

It used to be that when you wanted to wish a friend well you would say, "Take it easy." What better advice could there be to insure well being and long life?

Well, a growing body of experience and some very recent studies suggest that taking it easy may be among the major provocative factors in our national "epidemic" of heart attacks and sudden death due to coronary artery disease.

Those who hold this view insist that "fit and active" people avoid the disasters of coronary artery disease, whereas those who live the leisurely life are the ones struck down.

This is a hard view to reconcile with one which holds that heart attacks are brought on by such risk factors as high cholesterol blood-levels due to faulty diets, overweight from overeating, high blood pressure and too many cigarettes.

According to Dr. George V. Mann of Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee, the "sneaker and support crown" are the ones who are on to the true preventive of the catastrophes of coronary heart disease. Vigorous exercise, he asserts, is the most effective means of maintaining good health, and thus avoiding heart attacks.

Now, from the California State Department of Health and the University of California School of Public Health in Berkeley comes evidence that, at least among some 6,000 longshoremen studied over a period of 22 years, repeated bursts of strenuous hard work have a protective effect against death from coronary heart disease not seen in their fellow workers doing light or sedentary work.

The results of this study show that the coronary death rate for high-activity cargo handling stevedores was about half that of their low-output fellow workers.

The apparent "protective" effect of steadily repeated bursts of hard labor was further pointed up in the incidence of sudden death from coronary artery disease. Among the high-output stevedores, the incidence of sudden death was 5.6 per 10,000 work-years, whereas among the moderate and light workers it was 19.9 and 15.7 respectively, a three to nearly four-fold difference.

Whether this protection against cardiac mortality and sudden death is the result of general "conditioning" of the heart and blood vessels, reduction in the blood-clotting tendency, an increase in the number of channels supplying blood to the heart muscle, or an exercise-induced reduction of the risk factors is not known.

But the impact of the message is very similar to what wise doctors said 75 years ago — that the tragedies of coronary heart disease were common among the affluent and sedentary, but far less frequent among hard-working day laborers.

All this cannot be interpreted as carte-blanche medical advice to ignore the risk factors and take a job as a longshoreman in order to avoid fatal heart attacks. But it does suggest that the lack of steady, vigorous exercise may be more of a health hazard than many of us have realized.

Hypertension is not a medical description of a highly strung person. Hypertension means raised blood-pressure and this high blood pressure does not appear in any particular age-group or type of person. Neither does it herald its' presence with specific warning signs. Persistent headaches, dizziness, shortness of breath, constant tiredness all go with high blood-pressure, but hypertension victims do not necessarily show these signs. Indeed, such symptons may arise from a variety of other illnesses.

BEGINNING ON JULY 22nd
This pharmacy is offering to check the blood pressure of any person requiring the assurance of such a test — as a free service. Each Tuesday, an experienced registered nurse will be in attendance from 12:30 to 1:00 p.m. to check your blood pressure and advise you or answer questions.

Installation Among Top Aluminum Siding Problems

By LYNNE GORDON

It is about this time of the year when you will be bombarded with ads, flyers, commercials or door-to-door salesman, all touting the virtues of aluminum siding.

There is no doubt that aluminum siding can be the answer to a lot of problems. Consumers are turning to siding in many cases for renovations, especially in an effort to upgrade old or rundown homes.

Siding made from wood or wood products suffers from rot, warp or shrinkage. The results are popping nails and cracked, split or loose boards. In spite of this, some consumers still prefer the natural beauty of wood and are willing to put in the time and money to keep it in top condition.

But if you hate the annual painting job, that may be one good reason to switch to aluminum siding. But remember, it's an expensive project.

And don't believe the ads that assure you aluminum siding is completely carefree. It must be washed once or twice a year — NOT just hosed down.

Beware of the extravagant claims that aluminum siding will save you substantially on heating costs. If a house is poorly constructed, adding the skin or siding will prevent heat loss and save fuel but well-built homes, the savings is marginal, something like 2-5 per cent.

INSTALLATION

One of the biggest problems is getting aluminum siding installed properly, at a fair price. That's where the majority of complaints come from.

A sloppy workman uses careless measurements leaving areas that need to be filled up with lots of caulking compound. He'll use materials that he claims are up to standard for your home but there aren't any standards set for renovations.

The Central Mortgage and Housing corporation requires 25 thousands of an inch for new construction but 19 is frequently used for renovations. Some unethical salesmen or installers may even try to slip you seconds and charge you for a first-quality product. An Alcan spokesman says to counteract these problems they make only first-quality and only one gauge — 25 thousands of an inch.

A careless workman may also cover up vital vents. Be sure that vents in the gable ends are left esposed or have a panel installed that has vent holes in it. This is important so that moisture can escape and air can be circulated in the spaces between the ceiling and roof.

If the existing wood is healthy and the wall straight the siding can be nailed on directly. Otherwise, apply wood strapping to the surface to be covered and then install the siding.

An unethical salesman may also throw around the names of top aluminum siding manufacturers but that doesn't mean he will actually use that siding on your home. The impression he wants to leave is that he is working for a brand name product and working for a respectable dealer. You should check to see if the manufacturer's name is stamped on the siding before it's applied.

SAFEGUARDS

The three top aluminum manufacturers, Alcan, Reynolds and Kaiser, have all agreed to co-operate with the Consumer Protection Bureau by insisting that their independent dealers are all registered and bonded with this agency. This means the dealer is responsible for his salesmen's promises and can be held liable. It has meant an upgrading in the type of sales force hired and a closer check on high-pressure methods.

The safest thing to do is ask the salesman for his credentials and check him out immediately with the dealer. You can also check with the manufacturer to make sure the dealer is entitled to the dealership he claims to have.

Remember, you do have a choice between aluminum steel and vinyl siding. Check all companies to make sure you get the siding that does the best job for you.

No matter who you deal with, make sure you get it all in writing. Make sure the brand, gauge and cost of materials are clearly specified. If you are financing the project, get the complete cost, including interest and added service charges. Get a starting and completion date. Never sign two contracts. One case before the court right now has an elderly couple who signed one contract for windows and doors. Later when they decided to have the entire house done, they unwittingly signed another contract which included some of the work already completed under the first contract. The salesman tried to collect twice on the basis of the two contracts.

GUARANTEES AND WARRANTIES

This has been a very confusing and misleading area. Make sure you understand who is backing the guarantee or warranty. Do you have one from the dealer AND the manufacturer. Does the contract cover labor or material or both. Don't assume labor is covered unless it is clearly stated. A 20-year guarantee is usually pro-rated, which means the equity declines over the years.

Prices have gone up, but overcharging can be a major concern, so always get at least three estimates.

Make sure that you will get service when needed.

In some areas that are heavily polluted, siding will pit. Ask if your warranty covers this problem and whether the manufacturer will replace the siding unconditionally.

COOLING-OFF PERIOD

If you have been pressured into signing a contract, you have a cooling-off period. In Ontario you can break the contract, FOR ANY REASON, by sending a registered letter to the company within two clear working days. In other provinces the cooling-off period can be anywhere from two to 10 says.

The best thing to do before you sign is keep a cool head and check the reputation of the installer with the Consumer Protection Bureau, your local Better Business Bureau and the municipal licensing agency.

Four Fingers Of Daylight

Evening's coming on and you're still a long way from camp. Will you make it in before dark? Maybe, maybe not . . . but here's how to accurately estimate the time till sundown:

Face the setting sun with arms extended and measure the distance between Ole Sol's base and the horizon in fingers (no thumbs). Each finger counts as fifteen minutes. Four of them, then, equal one hour . . . four on one hand and two on the other add up to an hour and a half . . . and so on.

If the space to be measured is greater than all eight fingers, hold a stick at arm's length with its base on the horizon and mark the position of the sun's bottom edge with your fingernail. The number of fingers it takes to fill the distance is your time.

In deep woods or hilly country where it's difficult to judge the horizon, work from an imaginary line at eye level.

Consumer Protector Policy Taking Buyer Beware Tack

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal role as consumer protector adopted in 1968 now is in the process of being shifted to the more neutral philosophy of "buyer beware."

John Read of the federal consumers services branch describes as in the thinking stage the format of an expanded consumer information program aimed mainly at lower-income groups.

That means a switch in Box 99, the department's complaint and inquiry service.

The Box 99 service was started in 1968 by the consumer affairs department as a storefront operation designed to protect the consumer, especially the poor and the elderly, against unfair trade practices.

Although offices were initially designed as walk-in aid centres, Box 99 headquarters is located on the 17th floor of a federal building in Hull, Que., across the Ottawa River from the capital. Regional offices are operated in major Canadian cities.

Despite the department's perceived need and the intent of the program, a recent trans-Canada study conducted for the department showed that only about 16 per cent of the population had any knowledge of the service.

A one-shot advertising campaign geared strictly to the Box 99 service was conducted in 1969, but a consumer affairs spokesman said that since then the consumer has not been provided with any information on a national basis.

She said the department is trying to decentralize its operations and that Box 99 is but a single feature of several integrated services.

Yet, the publicized aim of the consumer protection branch in 1968 was to assist the poor, the elderly and similar groups to gain redress for injustices in the marketplace. Perhaps because of its lack of advertising, Box 99, since its inception seven years ago, has received only 118,680 consumer complaints and 39,710 inquiries from a population of more than 22 million.

Last year, 29,225 complaints were received compared with 3,169 in the first year of the operation.

When a complaint is received by Box 99 officials they can only make representations to the company, firm or person named. They have no official authority to take action against an offender.

The service can, however, take the matter to the federal or provincial government department under whose jurisdiction the complaint falls.

If, for example, a consumer complains to Box 99 about a faulty braking system on a new car and investigation shows the company to be at fault, a course of action would be recommended by Box 99 officials.

If the company refused to acknowledge the situation the inquiry might, in this case, be placed in the hands of the transport department for an official investigation that might result in legal action against the offending company.

PRETTY WACs GET TOP JOBS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Enlisted women in the U.S. army have been selected for top staff jobs in Washington partially on how pretty they are.

A committee of generals who reported on the army's equal opportunity efforts recommended an end to the policy, which it said meant "looks, figure and personality are considered when female personnel are nominated for assignment to high level staff."

"The practice violates . . . policy and discriminates against the individual who is not as physically attractive as others. Physical attributes are less important than . . . proficiency," the report said.

"The assumed object of presenting a good appearance may be served, but it has an adverse effect on the morale of that majority who are not so physically attractive."

At the same time, the study recommended continuing the unwritten policy of selecting recruiters and drill sergeants who "have no obvious distracting disfigurations" because they must project "a superior image of the army."

16 Women Succeed At Management

CUGGIONO, Italy (AP) — Sixteen women have made a small factory near Milan into Italy's most successful experiment in worker management.

The staff of the Work and Freedon bath mat factory say their only aim is to make enough money to live on and that neither politics nor ideology is a factor.

In its days of peak production, the factory, known then as Velco, had 50 workers and turned out about 500 bath mats a day.

By last February, the work force was down to 32 and the company announced it was going to fire more because of the recession. The 32 women occupied the plant.

By April, half the women had left, fearing legal troubles. But the remaining 16 turned out 150 mats a day using material already in stock.

With the profits from their first sales, the 16 ordered new material. They also enlisted the aid of a nearby maintenance firm to keep their machines running smoothly.

"And now, a bank has offered us a multi-million-lire loan," one of the women said. "We have rejected the offer for the moment, though, as we can still get by on our own."

"We could take more now as sales last month were extremely good, but we prefer to build up some reserves which could come in handy in harder months," said Anna Morgante.

The women are awaiting a court decision on their takeover later this month. They say they are willing to hand the factory over to its owners if full employment is guaranteed.

NEW CHIEF FOR CBC

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced Thursday the appointment of A. W. Johnson as president of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, effective Aug. 1.

The selection of Mr. Johnson, now executive vice-president of the CBC, had been expected here for several weeks. He will be succeeded in his present post by Pierre Desroches.

Johnson, 51, was born in Insinger, Sask., and rose to become deputy provincial treasurer and secretary of the treasury board during the CCF term of office in the 1950s.

He joined the federal public service in 1964 and has served as treasury board secretary and deputy welfare minister.

CIA Opened, Kept Mail from Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Central Intelligence Agency not only intercepted mail coming from the Soviet Union; it kept some of it.

Now the justice department has found out and is looking into possible prosecution.

CIA officials have already testified that they had a program between 1953 and 1973 in which thousands of letters entring the New York, San Francisco and other post offices from various communist countries were opened, read and sent on to the addresses.

In the cases of many more thousands of letters, the names of addresses were tabulated without opening the mail.

But somehow, according to officials, the 85 post cards and 25 letters—all opened—ended up on a shelf in a CIA vault. CIA officials recently found them there in the course of a routine office move.

NEW COMET STREAKS INTO VIEW

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A newly discovered comet is streaking into view, Caltech announced Thursday.

The comet is bright enough to be seen by the unaided eye and will get brighter as it makes its closest approach to earth — 242 million miles — next Monday, astronomers said. It is passing through the constellation Cygnus and can be seen high in the eastern sky about 8 p.m. and overhead about midnight.

The comet was discovered last Saturday night by three astronomers working independently in scattered locations, the announcement said. Douglas Bergef at the Palomar Observatory in California, Dennis Milton in Wyoming and Toru Kobayashi in Tokyo.

The comet had only a small tail, but it will become larger and glow more brightly as the comet approaches the sun and more icy dust particles are boiled off, astronomers said.

In the 1949 National Championships a deal arose which became the most post-mortemed deal of the tournament. The issue under analysis was the proper way of handling the trump suit. Here is that deal. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

| 1 ♠ | Pass | 2 ♠ | Pass |
| 6 ♠ | Dbl. | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

Opening lead: Nine of ♥.

The above was the bidding sequence at one of the tables. The play follows.

After winning the opening heart lead with his ace, declarer laid down his ace of trumps, the contract was now doomed to defeat, for West could not be prevented from winning two trump tricks: a second trump lead would be taken by West's king, after which West would lead the nine of trumps to dummy's queen. And, in time, west's jack of trumps would take the setting trick.

In the discussions that followed, it was pointed out that if South's original trump lead (at trick two) had been a low trump, declarer would have fulfilled his contract. With dummy's ten winning, a club would then be trumped, and another low trump lead would be made towards dummy's queen. All West could now make would be his king of trumps.

Those who argued for the original lead of a low trump (instead of the ace) stated that West would not have doubled the slam contract unless he had the four outstanding trumps. Their adversaries (in debate) stated that this was sheer nonsense: that if West held, for example, the K-x-x of trumps, the diamond king, and the ace of clubs, he surely would have doubled the six-spade contract. And that, in this presumed set-up, "if South leads a low trump to the ten, and sees East take the trick with the singleton jack, South has to kill himself."

I am inclined to feel that those who favored the initial lead of a low trump out of the South hand were correct (they were on THIS given day). While it is true that East might have possessed, specifically, the singleton jack, the odds against this were quite remote. And, assuming that West rated to be the possessor of the trump king (because of his double), it seems to me that the winning line of play was the correct one.

However, it should be remembered that hindsight always has 20-20 vision.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Another Kent in my road?" Stan chuckled. "Sure, that's my son Ted, and we're both on the even number side."

Alan nodded. "Nice to have them so close. I forget his number, but it's only a short road anyway."

"That's right," Stan agreed. "In fact all the even numbers between his and mine total exactly what you get if you multiply my number by his."

What were the two numbers?

Thanks for idea to W. L. Birney, Vancouver, British Columbia

(Answer Monday.)

Alcoholic Businessman Sues Firm

DETROIT (AP) — A retired Ford Motor Co. executive who says he drank his way up the corporate ladder to head the firm's Swiss operations has filed a $1.3-million suit against the auto-maker, accusing it of turning him into an alcoholic.

The suit filed in Wayne County circuit court Thursday by John Brennan, 56, claims that alcoholism drove him into early retirement.

Brennan, once board chairman and managing director of Ford in Switzerland, said his drinking problem was "direct result" of his job and increased as he was promoted during his 26 years with Ford.

He said he sought aid from two Ford vice-presidents — in a midnight conversation over a bottle of scotch in a Zurich hotel bar — but was asked to sign a letter of resignation.

"I signed the letter," he said. "I don't know what the alternative was but imagined that it was public disgrace and termination without benefits. At no time was I offerd help of any kind."

Ford officials declined to comment on Brennen's suit, which seeks compensation for salary he would have earned with Ford from 1970, when he was given special early retirement, to 1984, when he would reach the normal retirement age of 65.

It says Ford broke oral and written contracts on continuation of his employment by failing to help him overcome the drinking problem.

LONDON — Two wives divorced the same husband in the same court before the same judge here Thursday and made British legal history.

The wives and the husband, security officer Alhaji Mohamed, all come from Nigeria where under Moslim law a husband is entitled to have up to four wives.

Awarding the divorce decrees in the High Court, the judge, Sir George Baker, commented: "This must be the very first time in these courts that two ladies have been able to divorce the same gentleman in one afternoon."

Adiza Mohamed, 41, who married in 1953 and has a son and two daughters by her husband, was granted her divorce decree because she and her husband have lived apart for more than five years.

Rabi Mohamed, 20, who was 13 when she married in 1967 and came to Britain as a child bride, was granted hers because of "unreasonable" behavior by her husband.

When Mohamed brought his child bride to Britain in 1968 a London children's officer had her taken into local authority care as being in "moral danger." Mohamed took the case to the High Court and won her release.

The two wives met for the first time outside the court Thursday and chatted while waiting for their cases to be heard. Their husband was not in court.

NEW YORK — Drummer Buddy Rich, who cancelled his band's tour of South Africa after his black bass player was denied a visa, said here Thursday that he would not change the group because of what he called a political whim.

SANTIAGO — Farm laborer Domingo Escalona, 67, woke up to find himself in a coffin, with his family and friends mourning him in a small village south of the Chilean capital.

His shouting and knocking sent the mourners fleeing in panic but two of the more daring ones returned to open the coffin and find Domingo indignantly demanding his breakfast.

He had been "dead" for 33 hours and laid out in the coffin for 27 of those hours.

He was then taken to a hospital where doctors said he had had a cataleptic fit, which had made him lose consciousness and go rigid.

LONDON — An Iranian miner who came to England for eye treatment following a mine accident will go home completely blind after being mugged here.

The story emerged Thursday in a west London court, where Yaghou Mohammady, 36, was fined 1 pound ($2.20) and recommended for deportation for overstaying his entry visa.

Mohammady came to London last September for treatment which did not aid his sight. The miner overstayed his visa in hopes of getting better treatment, was arrested, and first came to court in May.

Two youths badly beat him up around that time and he received injuries to his eyes which totally blinded him.

Fewer Growing Fall Perennials

Fall flowering perennials are grown by fewer gardeners each season it seems, yet their beauty used to be the main attraction in local gardens. Late August, September and early October had as much color as April and May, and it all came from perennials left in the ground from year to year, or at least living in the ground over winter.

Today apart from specialist show growers of dahlias and chrysanthemums, both of which must be lifted and stored for winter protection, few fall perennials are noticed.

For those who have inherited a collection of these useful and lovely plants, here are a few notes about culture to help care for them. All have been successfully grown here for years, and the culture given is adapted to conditions in this locality.

Artemisia lactiflora, five foot, light green much cut leaves, and plumes of milk white fragrant flowers. Needs division and resetting every third year, in spring.

In our dry summers, asters must have ample humus in the soil to hold moisture which must be given by artificial deep watering. In dry soil they soon develop dry withered stems and poor flowers. In eastern Canada, where many are native they grow in ditch areas or along fencelines where moisture is retained from frequent summer storms. The best flowering is had from early spring basal shoots taken as cuttings to make new plants; or by replanting new divisions of established plants.

The good pink named Harrington's Pink was discovered near Ottawa in the early 1900s and the species Aster cordifolius and Aster ericoides are both easterners.

Heleniums are perennials coming in several named colors, all of fall interest gold, bronze and nut browns. Easy enough to grow, giving masses of cut flowers as well as garden display. The plants need division for replanting every third year.

Rudbeckia of Prairie folks' memories, Black-eyed Susan, has more than one offering for fall coastal gardens. All are basically the Cone-flower type, with petals of varying sizes and colors of gold, bronze and brown. All need division every second year.

A handsome plant during August, flowers open towards the end of that month, continuing throughout September. Height to four feet, needing division every second year.

Another pink fall perennial is Sedum spectabile, the Showy-stonecrop, at 12-inch height with grey-blue succulent leaves, but unbelievably hardy and durable without division. Flowers are pink or dark crimson by September throughout the month, occurring in numerous flat clusters.

Kniphofia, the Redhot-poker, is a giant to six feet enduring practically anything, especially in a clay base soil.

This is the perennial with the longest season of bloom, for it is out ready for June flower shows and still producing massive new heads of yellow and flame to the end of September season of fall shows. By Christmas in normal winters, a few heads are still to be seen. The plants can be divided to reduce their size, but where they are wanted as a feature, this is not needed for 20 years.

Looking over the culture of these perennials, I begin to see why they are not grown by gardeners today — we are getting lazy. We don't want the work of lifting plants for division enen though it would entail only two or three each year in the average garden.

If we can overcome this laziness, we can again have plenty of color in fall gardens and good plants to look at all season.

DEAR MOM

Oh, how well I remember growing up in our lovely home. What a delight to play in the shade of those trees and pick our own luscious peaches. Working in the large vegetable garden wasn't really too bad after all. You know, breathtaking sea views like we had then are impossible to find now. In fact, we looked at a home just like yours today that had 1500 sq. ft. 3 bedrooms, 3 bathrooms, full basement, wired for intercom, heatilator fireplace up, thermopane floor-to-ceiling windows, 9 yrs old.... Mom, you wouldn't believe the fantastic prices now! What a buy yours was at $87,900 back in 1975. We'll always remember that home.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call:

Lisbon Forces Put on Alert

LISBON (AP) — Portuguese troops went on partial alert today as Communist headquarters in two cities were attacked and pressure mounted from moderate military men for the ouster of pro-Communist Premier Vasco Goncalves.

In the conservative north, meanwhile, thousands of Socialists streamed into Oporto for a demonstration against the leftist armed forces. Tension there increased as the Communist-dominated Central Trade Union, Intersindical, called on its members for "popular vigilance" and a counter-demonstration.

In the early-morning hours, mobs attacked Communist party headquarters in Louirinha and Cadavul, two towns about 50 miles north of Lisbon. The crowds sacked the offices and burned books and files in the streets.

The Soviet news agency Tass quoted a communique of the Portuguese Communist party as saying "there are gravely wounded among the Communists who defended" the offices.

Informed sources said Goncalves was again under pressure from moderate military men disturbed by his radical stance and failure to solve the country's mounting political and economic problems.

He narrowly missed being ousted several days ago when President Francisco da Costa Gomes refused to allow a vote of the armed forces' Supreme Revolutionary Council. Goncalves nevertheless held a second day of meetings of the coalition government after Socialists and Popular Democrats, the country's two largest parties, walked out because of what they said were threats to democracy.

QUINTS BORN

DALLAS (UPI) — A Lewisville, Tex., woman today gave birth to quintuplets born six weeks prematurely within a six-minute period at Parkland Hospital.

Mrs. Jerry Davis gave birth to four girls and one boy. There were no reported complications.

Doctors said the first child was delivered at 11:16 a.m. and the last at 11:22.

Hospital officials said they did not believe the woman had been taking any fertility drugs.

The boy weighed 3 pounds, 10 ounces; one girl weighed 2 pounds, 3 ounces; another girl was 3 pounds, 3 ounces, and another girl weighed 1 pound, 14 ounces. The weight of the other female was not known.

Channel 10 Bid Nearer

Transport Minister Bob Strachan said today the provincial government and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation are close to an agreement on making a bid for the use of Channel 10.

He made the statement after the Canadian and Radio Television Commission announced in Ottawa that it has approved Western Approaches Ltd.'s application for a television station transmitting on the ultra high frequency Channel 26.

Leaving the regular Channel 10 still open, some sources said, is a strong indication that the CRTC is receptive to CBC using it for transmission in the Greater Victoria area.

Strachan said he's very receptive to CRTC's action in delaying the granting of a licence for Channel 10, adding B.C. and the CBC are close to agreement on a plan first rejected by the CBC six month ago.

The provincial government will support CBC's bid. In return, the government will be given time for educational programs, some prime time being included.

Strachan said he's "very optimistic that this is what will happen."

Western Approaches Ltd. had been seeking Channel 10 but had told the CRTC it would be willing to take a UHF licence if Channel 10 was not available. Two other companies — Pacific Rim Broadcasting Ltd. and Ten Television Ltd. also made bids for the Channel 10 licence.

Hugh Palmer of Vancouver, CBC's director of television in B.C. confirmed negotiations are nearing completion between CBC and the government.

"They are fairly close to completion. We had a meeting with a senior staff member of Mr. Strachan's department three weeks ago and, as a result of that meeting we are very close to agreement," he said.

Victoria is the only provincial capital, with the exception of Saint John, N.B. that does not have a CBC station.

At the CRTC's April hearing in Vancouver, deputy communications minister Charles Dalten said the government was in favor of Channel 10 going to the CBC if time was provided for provincial education programs.

Charles Butler headed a Victoria group that urged the CRTC to keep Channel 10 for public and educational broadcasting.

POST FILLED

University of Victoria's teacher instructor Bruce Andrews has been hired as director of teacher services for the provincial government, Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Thursday.

The newly-created position is designed to improve the department's services to the teaching profession.

His duties will include pre-service and in-service teacher education, teacher certification, teacher exchange services and directing the maintenance of records of all registered teachers.

Andrews has been co-ordinator for a teacher internship program at UVic.

5 Rest Homes Shutting Down

Five Victoria rest homes containing 74 occupants are the latest in a string of rest homes shutting down for lack of money, B.C. Rest Home Association president John Hanrahan said today.

More than 20 in the city have closed their doors to their elderly tenants in the past two years, he said.

"The government doesn't seem to be too concerned," said Hanrahan.

He said the provincial government has given no increases in subsidy rates for a year despite increasing costs and promises by human resources minister Norm Levi.

Rest home operators need about $525 per month to give a patient intermediate care, for instance, he said, and the government only supplies $400.

Homes recently closed are the Waldoris, 1015 Joan Cres., Kathryn May, 1016 Fairfield, and Mansion Guest Home, 1447 St. David, each of which had 15 residents.

Two more closing next month are the Alpine Lodge, 1663 Oak Bay Ave. and Cascade Rest Home, 1162 McClure, he said, which have 17 and 12 residents.

About two-thirds of the residents have found alternate homes, said Hanrahan. The other third who need extended care still have not been placed.

PASSES TO STAY

A new directive on the issuance of temporary absence passes for inmates of federal prisons will not curtail prisoner community service activity as much as originally feared.

The directive sent out last week from the regional office of the Canadian Penitentiary Service stated that those passes issued on a regular and recurring basis were a matter for consideration of the parole service and not of prison authorities.

Prison officials and inmates were upset with the change in policy believing it would result in curtailment of prisoner community programs.

However, William Head prison director, John Mulroney, said today he met with senior CPS and Parole Board officials in Vancouver Thursday who explained the new instruction did not apply in cases where prisoners granted passes are escorted by guards.

INVESTMENT SCRUTINY SET

OTTAWA (CP) — Government screening of new investment by foreign-owned business will begin Oct. 15, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said today.

On that date the second part of the Foreign Investment Review Act will go into effect, following by more than a year proclamation of the first part of the act, which covers take-overs of existing businesses.

Some provincial governments, particularly Ontario, have argued long and forcefully against proclamation of the second part of the act, arguing that it might harm slow-growth regions.

"I want to assure honorable members," Gillespie said in making the announcement in the Commons, "that there will be no unnecessary delay in investment programs important to the development of designated regions of the country through duplication of administrative procedures."

"I should like to emphasize . . . that the purpose of the Foreign Investment Review Act is not to block foreign investment from any source or to discourage it, but rather to ensure that such investment is of significant benefit to Canada."

The guides, released today, cover new investment or expansion by foreign firms or foreign-owned companies here.

Companies will not come under the scrutiny of the Foreign Investment Review Agency if their business grows.

The agency will only be examining expansion into unrelated fields. An example an agency official gave at a briefing today would be if General Motors of Canada Ltd. wanted to go into the hotel business.

2,300 Seeking 22 Jobs

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

There are over 2,300 Victoria young people seeking 22 jobs at student Canada Manpower — and office director Pat Torrison has launched a campaign to do something about the job shortage.

A flyer will be distributed to 5,000 Victoria households urging residents to hire students for odd jobs.

"We are looking for any kind of suitable jobs ranging from housepainting to cutting grass and cleaning attics. We have 100 students per day coming into the office asking for any kind of work. We want them to get some spending money in their pocket and the sense of self respect that comes with having a job — even if just for a day or two."

She said the job shortage is a dramatic reversal from last year when there were as many jobs as there were students seeking them.

"Most of the young people who come in are really eager and it is heartbreaking to see them come in day after day only to discover there are no jobs available."

One girl was so determined to find work she accepted a babysitting job on Galiano Island.

The flyers will be distributed in the Greater Victoria area by Torrison, 25, and her staff of five, all University of Victoria students, who are employed at the student Canada Manpower office at 824 Johnson Street. They are looking for volunteers to help them distribute the flyers.

The staff will also distribute flyers at shopping centres and will clean up the litter if the flyers are discarded.

Of the 22 jobs on the board, eight are sales positions, including door-to-door work. Although the tourist season is in full swing, only three waitress jobs are posted.

The list of baby-sitting positions has fallen to one, and that's in Sooke.

The student Manpower office had a peak of 3,000 young people on the list and found jobs for 700. However, the supply of jobs appears to have dried up and the only hope for students seems to be if householders respond, Torrison said.

Many of the young people are counting on summer income to pay for their studies this fall.

"She was very keen, but we suggested she be satisfied with working for her parents or for a neighbor until she is a little older."

The oldest student is a woman about 30.

In addition to the job-placement section, the student Canada Manpower office holds a daily class at 10 a.m. to give suggestions to young people on how to find work on their own.

One of the suggestions the young people get is to make business cards giving their name, address and phone number and outlining the type of work they are looking for. These cards could then be distributed to neighbors.

U.K. Inflation Soars to 26.1%

LONDON (AP) — Britain's rate of inflation soared to a record 26.1 per cent in the 12 months ending in June, the government announced today.

It was the fourth month in succession that a new high was reached and confirms Britain's ranking as the country with the worst inflation in Europe.

The latest figures come only a week after Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government announced plans to get inflation down to 10 per cent in a year's time by limiting weekly wage increases to £6.

The department of employment said the annual rate of inflation increased from the 25 per cent reported in May because of a 1.9-per-cent increase in prices in June. A large part of that increase was due to the cost of fresh foods, particularly potatoes, which until this month were selling at more than 30 cents a pound.

Government officials said inflation is expected to continue rising slowly for some months to come, reflecting recent wage settlements of 30 per cent and more in British industry.

But they expect the pay ceiling, effective Aug. 1, to begin to bite into the cost of living figures by the end of the year.

Among other industrial countries, figures for the 12 months ending in May indicate the United States had an inflation rate of 9.5 per cent, Japan 14.1 per cent, France 12.1 per cent, West Germany 6.1 per cent, Italy 19.7 per cent and Belgium 13.7 per cent.

Blockade May Be Legal

The Indian blockade of the road between Gold River and Muchalat Inlet appears to be situated on land legally owned by the Indians and therefore not illegal.

"Land registry office records indicate that the land is theirs but we don't know all the negotiations that may have gone on," Deputy Attorney-General David Vickers said today.

Until ownership of the 1.91 acre site on which the Indian barricade is situated is definitely ascertained, government action to end the five-day blockade is uncertain.

Indians have maintained that the road, which runs from the town of Gold River through reserve land to the Tahsis Co. pulp mill and the wharves on Muchalat Inlet, is on Indian land for which compensation was never paid.

Gold River RCMP said a second Indian blockade was set up early this morning on a gravel road leading to the pulp mill, but this blockade came down about 8:20 a.m.

At Mount Currie near Pemberton, the Mount Currie Indian band council was to meet this morning to discuss a noon deadline they were given to remove their month-long blockade of the Lillooet Lake Road.

Bill Wilson, one of three executive members of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, was to arrive at Mount Currie this morning to attend the meeting.

At a band meeting Thursday evening, RCMP Cpl. G. W. Gibbs told the Mount Currie Indians the blockade must come down today, and asked them to decide this morning whether they would remove it themselves.

Band member Verna Stager said Gibbs was asked whether he intended to send in the riot squad if the blockade remained.

"He just said he's hopeful that the Indians will agree to bring it down themselves," she said. "If not, he'll bring in the necessary equipment."

Gibbs said today he's aware there is a militant group among the band members who would like to maintain the blockade, but he's hopeful the band council will act responsibly.

"If they're ever going to display leadership I think now's the time," he said.

Vickers announced Thursday he had written Mount Currie chief Allan Stager saying the blockade must come down immediately.

At the same time he announced that Indians at the Gold River blockade were told negotiations on Indian grievances can take place only after the barricade is removed.

Three senior provincial officials, led by deputy highways minsiter Howard Sturrock, went to Gold River Thursday afternoon to talk to the Indians at the blockade.

The Indians bluntly refused to negotiate until Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs executive members were present, so the officials left in frustration.

UBCIC executive member Philip Paul said he intends to go to Gold River today to find out exactly what the protesters' grievances are.

UBCIC Thursday passed a resolution of support for the Mount Currie band and condemned the ultimatum issued by the attorney-general.

TRUMPET VOLUNTEER was a blowhard, but he got more wind in his cheeks than he did in the trumpet. Tom Drake, holding the instrument, was ready with instructions to help Chris Palmer learn to make more sound with less effort. Drake is one of seven members of a high school band spending the summer teaching London, Ont., children about musical instruments.

Fears in Canada

OTTAWA (FP) — Canada is facing a new increased round of inflation in 1976 according to economists who have examined the outlook in the context of the latest budget, Conservative leader Robert Stanfield told the Commons Thursday.

Finance Minister John Turner agreed that this was a major concern confronting the finance department and the government generally.

"It depends very much on food prices and on the effect that wage and cost of production increases may have on the price structure of the country," said Turner.

Opposition finance critic Sinclair Stevens asked if it is the intention of Turner to continue in the post of finance minister and face up to the result of his economic policies next year.

Turner did not answer.

Stanfield recalled that in May the finance minister had urged Canadians to face up to the fact that "time is running out," in the current economic crisis.

And now that Canadians are facing the prospect of further severe inflation in 1976 Mr. Stanfield asked Turner to tell Parliament what he proposed to adopt as additional policy to encourage further restraint.

He asked if Turner intends to make any further efforts to achieve voluntary agreement on restraint.

Turner pointed out that he had told the press on budget night that he would wait to assess the reaction to the budget by the leaders of the various sectors of the economy.

Metchosin Gets Assurance

More Mills Shut Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — More mill shutdowns were reported Thursday as B.C.'s huge forestry industry began feeling the spreading effects of a strike by nearly 12,000 pulp workers.

The pulp workers, members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the Canadian Paperworkers' Union, went on strike Wednesday at all 20 pulp mills in the province.

Canadian Cellulose, owned 79 per cent by the government, was reported shutting down its sawmill and logging operations at Terrace. That would affect 800 IWA members.

Canadian Forest Products announced it will close its Eburne sawmill in the Fraser Valley, affecting 585 IWA members, and other mills are expected to follow as wood chips destined for the idle pulp mills pile up.

Although the provincial government has bought and is buying land for housing in the Metchosin area, the purchases don't extend into the true rural heartland.

A senior official of Dunhill Development Corporation, the provincial housing development agency, gave that assurance to a Colwood public meeting Thursday night, in an obvious attempt to dispel recent rumors of planned urban intrusion into Metchosin.

Speculation was that the government's land banking program would stretch from the vicinity of Latoria Road as far south as the William Head prison, gobbling up much of Metchosin's agricultural land and spoiling its rural charm.

The fears, voiced earlier this week at a meeting of the Metchosin Ratepayers' Association, were aired again Thursday night when some 200 residents of the so-called Western Community attended a meeting sponsored by the Capital Regional District to discuss the preparation of a community plan for Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

But David O'Brien, vice-president of Dunhill responsible for land acquisition, stood up late in the meeting to identify himself and dismiss the rumors.

"We haven't purchased any land outside the urban containment area as proposed in the official Regional Plan last year," he said, and there was no intention to do so.

"I am sorry for those of you who thought we might be knocking on your doors with vast offers," he added.

He said he envisaged the development would be a mixture of housing styles, including some co-operative housing and rental accommodatin, with a "broad range of incomes involved."

On a more general note, regional planner Peter Hammer told residents the purpose of the meeting was mainly to outline broad concepts of the regional plan adopted last year, and to suggest ways in which these could be refined and detailed in a community plan for Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

He asked them to present their ideas and briefs at a workshop which opens at Belmont Fisher High school next Monday, running weekdays though July and August from 1 to 9 p.m.

The plan assumes the population of the three communities will triple from its acres has already been bought or is under option, and that represents only a portion of the land banking program for Metchosin.

O'Brien noted that a key element in planning for housing is a trunk sewer system, and studies on this will have to be undertaken in conjunction with the regional district.

The southerly limit of the plan's suggested containment area follows the general line of the electoral boundary separating Colwood, Langford and Metchosin. It runs along Brjarwood Lane, less than a mile south of Latoria.

However, the meeting was told by regional planning officials that when a community plan is prepared to complement the regional plan, the containment area will probably be adjusted in keeping with physical features — especially watershed drainage — rather than political demarcation.

In an interview after the meeting, O'Brien said he was unable to indicate the extent of the land purchases to date in the Latoria-Briarwood area, or the planned eventual total.

But another source in the provincial housing department said more than 200

Shuttle Diplomacy In Space

HOUSTON (AP) — In a spirit of good-humored camaraderie, Apollo astronauts and Soyuz cosmonauts executed their own brand of shuttle diplomacy today in a series of visits between their linked orbital homes.

There was much back-slapping and hand-shaking as spacemen moved through a tunnel connecting the two ships.

Hosts took visitors on television tours of the respective craft, family pictures were proudly displayed and meals shared.

Cosmonaut Valeri Kubasov pointed a television camera out the window over the Soviet Union as he gave visiting Vance Brand a high-altitude travelogue of his homeland, a vast stretch from the Black Sea to the Pacific.

As the spacemen continued their unprecedented space journey, Soyuz commander Alexei Leonov and Brand made early-morning transfers to the other's craft.

It was the first of three transfers on this final day of linkup on the first international space mission.

The five spacemen also arranged a farewell ceremony and a televised news conference later today, to answer questions submitted by reporters in Houston and Moscow.

Leonov was the first of the Soviet crew to visit Apollo. U.S. astronauts Thomas Stafford and Donald Slayton visited the Soyuz for nearly three hours Thursday after the docking of the two ships 140 miles high.

The cosmonauts, hosts for the first cosmic dinner, provided traditional borscht soup, jellied turkey, tiny loaves of Russian bread and other space treats for the Americans.

Laws for Modern Times, Modern Crimes

OTTAWA — More protection in the courts for victims of rape, roadside screening tests for drinking drivers, tighter bail laws and provisions for dealing with "syndicates" and international criminals, were incorporated in a law and order package announced Thursday.

The 102 criminal law amendments proposed by Justice Minister Otto Lang reflect, more or less, modern times and modern crimes.

Rape victims no longer would be subject to sudden cross-examination about their past, and they would get other protections against court room treatment that has often made them look, and feel, like an accused person than a plaintiff.

Lang said these moves would increase the number of rapes that are reported and prosecuted.

"Our attitudes toward the offence of rape are changing and the amendments provide protection to the complaintant while keeping in mind the rights of the accused," Lang said.

Under present law a rape trial judge is required to warn the jury of the danger of convicting the accused if the complaintant's testimony is not corroberated.

Appeal courts no longer would be able to reverse jury acquitals, as they did in the case of Dr. Morgentaler, reversing the jury verdict and sending the Montreal abortionist to prison for 18 months.

The bill's area of broadest public impact is a series of breath-test provisions that would enable police to require a person who leaves a bar and gets into a car to blow into the balloon.

The bill was given first reading in the Commons Thursday and will come up for second reading during the fall session which begins Oct. 14.

It is unlikely to become law before the late winter or spring after lively committee study and debate.

It may play second fiddle to the omnibus public safety bill Lang and Solicitor-General Warren Allmand are working on.

This bill will contain amendments to the law on capital punishment, gun controls, parole and related matters.

Thursday's bill is the sternest of the annual criminal law amendment bills to arrive before the Parliament since John Turner — then justice minister — initiated them in 1969 after his predecessor, Pierre Elliott Trudeau, had hatched the idea.

Excepting the rape amendments, the Morgentaler amendment, and a clause legalizing pinball machines, the bill tends to tighten and stiffen the law.

The proposed breath-test penalties would be the same as those for impaired driving.

Trio to Push Berger's Reforms

The provincial government has appointed a three-man commission to implement Berger Commission recommendations on family courts and juvenile delinquency.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said provincial court judge Harold Keenleyside of Vancouver will head the commission. Other members will be Mish Vadasz and Allison Brunet.

It is hoped the committee will be able to devise a system to balance the concepts of totally segregating juvenile offenders from society or allowing almost total permissiveness, said Macdonald.

If the court facilities are designed to solve juvenile problems rather than to punish offenders, youngsters likely would be more receptive to the judicial system, he said.

The province's 45 justice councils will help initiate the program which will be implemented in stages, he added.

Berger's 66 recommendations ranged from a tighten rein on hard-core juvenile delinquents to an integrated court system that could deal pressing needs" in the fields of

Macdonald said the commission would work closely with departments of health, education, and human resources.

The commission will attempt to relieve the "very pressing needs" in the fields of family court and juvenile delinquents.

In the current system, Macdonald said, children have to be raised and dealt with in adult court or made wards of the superintendent of child welfare.

The commission will launch a "major assault" on the problems, he said.

He referred to the Keenleyside commission as an "implementation team to attempt to solve the problems of the "abismal facilities in many areas of the province."

New assessment facilities would offer a facility for a youngster to "cool out" and allow workers to be accepted. He indicated few custodial centres are planned.

Although Keenleyside declined to specify his first target, he said changes would be phased in.

"The commission will carry out its job with as much expedition as we can muster, but there's no deadline."

Keenleyside said the commissioners are well aware of the needs of the courts for dealing with the problem.

A major Berger commission proposal was the phasing in of a unified family court system to provide short-term crisis counselling to people before the courts, juvenile or family, and a professional advisory service to judges to help them make "meaningful dispositions."

PERON SEEKS TIME OFF

Times News Services

BUENOS AIRES — President Isabel Peron is considering asking the Argentine Congress to grant her a 60-day leave of absence beause of illness, well-informed sources said today.

There was no official confirmation of the report, and congressional sources said Thursday night that such a request has not been submitted.

Peron, 44, was bedridden for the third day in the presidential residence at Los Olivos with a serious cold, a medical bulletin said.

Doctors said she does not have a fever and "is improving rapidly."

But sources said the doctors have advised the president to take a rest, preferably outside Argentina, which is in the midst of winter.

Peron's illness has prevented her from dealing with a host of economic and political problems besetting the country.

The government has placed Argentina's rate of inflation at more than 110 per cent. The influential business magazine Mercado has predicted a figure of 200 per eent by year's end, calling the figure "optimistic."

A two-day general strike last week to protest a government economic austerity package ended when Peron backed off from a tough proposal to limit salary hikes and allowed wage increases of as much as 160 per cent.

She accepted resignations from nearly half her top cabinet ministers during the crisis, but has reconfirmed Economy Minister Celestino Rodrigo, author of the austerity plan and target of bitter criticism from the labor movement.

RODENT IN COKE

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) A Portland man who claims that a dead rodent in a Coca-Cola bottle made him violently ill filed a $634,600 suit Thursday against the Pacific Coca-Cola Bottling Co.

Robert Collins said he purchased a quart bottle of Coca-Cola May 9 and became severely ill after drinking some of it.

"He said the beverage was unwholesome, poisonous and unfit for human consumption in that it contained a deceased and contaminated rodent," the complaint said.

present figure of about 20,000 to 60,000 by 1996, and one resident wanted to know how the area could absorb this expansion "when we can't cope with the road and drainage problems we have now."

"You should have asked us if we wanted all these people out here," he added.

In many cases present residents established there because they wanted to enjoy the peace and quiet of country living and planners shouldn't assume that everyone wanted swimming pools and other urban amenities.

Hammer replied that growth management is a fundamental issue, and realistic planning has to porceed on the assumption that there will be population growth, whether that is desirable or not.

Accepting the fact that agricultural land on the Saanich Peninusla must be preserved, and that only Saanich of the core municipalities offers real scope for coping with population increases, the Western Community was the logical choice for expansion.

Several people attending the meeting were skeptical about the value of the planning exercise, and said the past record of the Capital Regional District in Colwood and Langford didn't give much cause for optimism.

John Waterman, president of the Metchosin Ratepayers Association, said if the panning mis-mash of Colwood Corners and commercial development along Goldstream were examples of what could be expected for the future, "I suggest you leave the job to the amateurs."

Regional director Earl Pallister said the present zoning bylaws were drawn up by the provincial government long before regional districts were established.

The regional board had asked repeatedly over the past 18 months to be given responsiblity for subdivision approval, "but they (the government) haven't seen fit to give it to us."

White House Team Works On Gas-Crisis Answers

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A U.S. government task force is drawing up a plan for President Ford to cope with natural gas shortages which officials said Thursday could be seriously worsened by reduced Canadian exports.

The task force, headed by the energy resources council, a White House agency, plans to report to Ford by Sept. 1.

The report will recommend measures to increase U.S. supplies of gas or alternative fuels, to conserve and reduce consumption and to ease the impact of shortages on the areas most affected.

The federal government in Ottawa announced Wednesday that exports would have to be reduced, but delayed a decision on the amount of the reduction.

"Although the Canadian announcement stated that every effort would be made to avoid curtailment of export deliveries over the coming heating season, any curtailment by Canada would add to the U.S. shortage," said spokesman for the U.S. Federal Eenrgy Administration.

Ottawa's announcement specifically warned that such efforts would exclude curtailments "which continue to concur in the Pacific northwest"—that is, gas exported from B.C.

The FEA expressed "serious concern" about the Canadian announcement.

The state department also described the situation as "serious."

introducing a minimum sentence of two weeks in jail for second offenders and three months for subsequent offenders.

More than 100,000 Canadians have been convicted at least once under the breath test since 1969.

Under the present law, a policeman must have reasonable grounds to believe a driver is impaired when he requires a breath test.

The proposed law would require only a reasonable belief that the driver had been drinking.

That means police would be able to monitor bars and taverns at night, getting to drivers before they leave the parking lot.

If the driver refused to take the test, he would be subject to the same penalty that would apply if he failed it.

The police also would be able to make roadside checks, setting up a breath-test van and testing any driver they believed had been drinking. A transport department survey last year found that at night, one driver in 12 was impaired and about one-quarter of the 7,000 stopped-charges weren't recorded in the survey — had been drinking.

Lang said the breath test had some impact for a year or two after its introduction but this "seemed to disappear" and tougher measures are needed.

The object isn't to get more convictions but to make "the dangers of conviction much more clear," even to casual drinkers.

Judges no longer would have the power to suspend licences on conviction.

But judges would be able to grant a conditional discharge — meaning no record, fine or jail term — providing the driver needed and was willing to take treatment for alcoholism.

Lang said police often can demonstrate that funds used by a perosn or company in Canada are "the direct proceeds of securities stolen in the United States and 'laundered' or passed through various companies that are a front for organized crime."

It also would be an offence to "comspire in Canada to commit an offence out of Canada" or vice-versa.

The manufacture or use of "black boxes" to get around long distance tolls also is being outlawed and credit card fraud, and organized crime in many cities, is being treated more seriously.

Begging was removed from the Criminal Code as a crime in 1972.

But pinball, outlawed in the 1940's as a pratice that corrupted youth, will become legal again "to relfect the changes in public attitudes."

He declined to give any forecast as to when the capital punishment issue would be dealt with in the Commons.

However, outside the House other members of the cabinet have pointed out that the present legislation providing for the death penalty for murderers of prison guards and policemen expires in 1977.

Clickety-Click

Victoria abounds with scenes for the shutterbug and the Inner Harbor rim has more than its share —of both. From any vantage point, out-of-town folks can focus on the pompous Empress or the stately seat of government. Tilted up, a camera catches hanging flower baskets, or down, a mall taking shaps on construction-cluttered Government St. A quick pan with a movie camera might even pick up a fleeing fugitive, but only on a rare occasion. Bobbing yachts and two-tier buses, ferries and more flowers—the list is endless. Is it worth the effort? Only the friends back home know for sure.

Eviction Dispute At Centre

Tenants in a private Victoria low-income housing project will be evicted under new rental policy there, says a resident — but the centre's board director insists tenants were never supposed to stay long.

Single parents at the Bishop Cridge Centre for the Family received a written rental policy one week ago that said any parent earning more than social assistance rates plus $100 per month had to leave.

"The policy was an intent to evice some of us," said Marie Hewison, a mother living there.

"There's supposed to be a reasonable turnover," said director Dr. Archie Gray. "We're trying to help parents over the hump (of financial difficulty) until they become self-sufficient.

"There are those who have found this a cosy little nest and feel they can live here for the rest of their lives,' said Gray.

"Some claim they were told they could by former administration. Whether they were or not, that was never our intent."

Gray said a three-year time period will now be put on each tenant after which his financial situation will be assessed for the centre to see whether he can move out on his own.

According to Hewison, income ceilings established by the policy won't encourage parents to train for jobs because they'll have to move to regular apartments once they get those jobs.

Apartments don't supply the daycare Bishop Cridge does, and jobs often don't supply the free medical care social assistance does, she said.

The centre has operated as a non-profit non-denominational project helping families since 1969.

'TOOK ONE CHANCE TOO MANY'

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Disciplinary action will "have to be taken" against the three deputy sheriffs officers escorting Danny Cain when he escaped Thursday morning, Goffrey Mortimer, head of the B.C. Sheriffs Service, said today.

"This sort of thing can't be condoned," Mortimer said without indicating what action will be taken against deputies Brian McClelland, John French, and Joseph Rivard, who were assigned to escort the 19-year-old youth back to B.C. Penitentiary.

"As they are civil servants there are limitations in what we can do," Mortimer said. "We are looking at the full spectrum of options. But if we suspend them, we are so short-staffed, we would not only be punishing them but ourselves too."

He said the deputies, who had escorted Cain on four previous occasions without incident, "took one chance too many."

Although the sheriff service regulations point out prisoners are "human beings and should be treated as such", the regulations also specify extra precautionary measures should be taken in exceptional cases.

Leg irons waist chains and straight jackets are all available if the occasion warrants.

"I believe compassion and complacency were the two things that steered the officers head in this instance rather than the concern for security or safety of the public."

Mortimer said his men had not anticipated trouble feeling there was sufficient security in numbers—three agaist one.

He said the deputies had handcuffed Cain with his hands in front rather than behind his back as that would have been too "uncomfortable" for the youth. They hadn't used leg irons because it would have posed problems in getting Cain onto the plane.

Cain, flanked by French and Rivard with McLelland behind, suddenly bolted as the four approached the ramp leading to the Air West float in the Inner Harbor at 11:35 a.m.

Victoria police inspector Richard Ward said Cain faked running forward then abruptly turned, gave one guard a body block and "took off running like a rabbit" across a parking lot, up a grassy bank to Belleville Street.

"Our men must have been terribly complacent and careless," Mortimer said. "But what concerns me is they either froze in their tracks or expected the other guy to do the fast running — or are just in lousy shape."

He said only one of the deputies, McLelland, was armed but there were conflicting reports whether he took out his gun.

"I hope he didn't," Mortimer said. "The men have been instructed not to use their weapons except in cases where someone's life is in jeopardy."

MORTIMER

While McLelland phoned for help Rivard and French ran after Cain and saw him dart into the Swiftsure Inn across the street.

An intensive search of the area was mounted and Cain was found within half an hour by Victoria detective Doug Richardson and Swiftsure head housekeeper Pearl O'Neil who spotted him hiding under a bed in room 104.

He submitted without struggle.

"Can I have a cigarette?" he asked Richardson who ironically was the same officer who discovered him in a duplex at 1166 Summit on Tuesday where Cain had been hiding out since his escape from Wilkinson Road jail Sunday.

Cain was returned to the Victoria police lockup by 12:15 p.m. and appeared in provincial court that afternoon charged with escaping lawful custody.

As in the case of the 14 other criminal charges the youth is now facing, he elected trial by judge alone and waived the right to preliminary hearing.

At 9:10 a.m. today he was put on a special charter plane and returned without incident to the B.C. Penitentiary where he will remain until his trial comes before Victoria country court this fall.

Mortimer said three other deputies were assigned the task of escorting him.

'Quiet Move' Into Cafe At Causeway

The provincial government sidewalk cafe on the causeway should be serving sandwiches and cold drinks within two weeks, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said today.

Although there has been "one roadblock after another," in setting up the controversial eating establishment in the former Causeway Esso station, Hartley said refurbihing estimated at less than $10,000 is going smoothly.

"We are moving in quietly with a minimum of costs," the minister said, adding the provincial government would have liked to have been granted a trade licence from Victoria city council.

"We wanted to co-operate," but the application — which the provincial government is not compelled to make—has been held up pending determination of whether the purpose fits land uses envisaged by Capital Improvement District Commission. A meeting of CIDC has been set for Thursday.

The menu will include sandwiches, cold drinks, tea and coffee and is under the management of a legislative dining room chef, Yvon Chouinard.

Apartments? Forget It!

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The supply of two and three-bedroom apartments for rent in the Victoria area has just about dried up, according to a survey by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation released today.

The survey showed the vacancy rate for two-bedroom apartments had fallen to 0.2 per cent the lowest level since the survey began in 1972, while the supply of three-bedroom apartments had fallen to nil, down from 0.6 per cent in December.

Ray Pitt, assistant manager of the Victoria CMHC office, said the decline in two-bedroom apartments was particularly troublesome.

He said this type of accommodation is in high demand because it enables young people to share an apartment and split the expenses. More affluent couples who only need one bedroom also are looking for two-bedroom apartments so they can have additional living space.

Pitt said there was little hope of improvement in the vacancy rate until 1976, when apartments under construction become available.

The over-all vacancy rate in Victoria is 0.3 per cent, making this area one of the four lowest in Canada. Lowest vacancy rate was Regina at 0.1 per cent, with Vancouver and Saskatoon tied at second-lowest with 0.2 per cent.

The Victoria vacancy rate had been 0.1 per cent in December and 0.7 per cent last June. The vacancy rate tends to be very low in December.

To avoid the misleading effects of seasonal fluctuations, CMHC has begun conducting its surveys in April and October. The latest figures are for April of this year.

While the over-all vacancy rate for the area for all sizes of apartments is 0.3 per cent, it is 0.1 per cent in Saanich, 0.5 per cent in Esquimalt, 0.3 per cent in Victoria City and nil in Oak Bay and View Royal.

The only relatively bright spot in the report is the increased availability of bachelor suites. The vacancy rate has risen to 0.6 per cent from 0.1 per cent in December. However, it had been a full one per cent last June.

The vacancy rate for one-bedroom suites was 0.2 per cent up from 0.1 per cent in December but below last June's rate of 0.4 per cent.

189 Off Job At Dockyard

A total of 189 civilian workers at HMC Dockyard in Esquimalt were off the job today as the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council's series of rotating strikes enters its seventh week.

Refit operations at the yard have been closed since the strike began June 5.

The Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, which covers workers in the Esquimalt and Halifax naval dockyards, has been negotiating with the federal treasury board for a new contract since March.

Solidarity Picketing Cancelled

A "solidarity picket" planned by striking Insurance Corporation of B.C. employees for Monday at the legislative buildings has been cancelled, a union spokesman said today.

Wayne Koski of the Office and Technical Employees Union, said the demonstration by OTEU members and other supporters in the trade union movement is being held in abeyance pending the outcome of negotiations now being held in Vancouver.

The Victoria Labor Council had earlier voted to support the demonstration.

What's That Out There, a Dorsal Fin?

ONE RECENT LONG and heavenly evening, I waded into a saltchuck reach between creek mouths to try for a breakfast trout. But imagination abetted by memory ruined my chances. Suppose that oddly-shaped object riding the tide wasn't driftwood? What if it were a dorsal fin attached to a ravening appetite?

This was ridiculous. Our Gulf of Georgia marine population doesn't run to man-eating sharks. Still, anyone who has seen Jaws, the suspenseful excursion into terror currently breaking movie-house box office records, may understand my retreat to ankle-deep water.

Win and I caught the film in Vancouver. We were strolling Granville Street with time on our hands when we came up against the tail of an impressive lineup. We tagged along. Presently Jaws engulfed us.

An hour or so later — one victim down and the great white shark that besets a New England shore community lining up its next human snack — the fellow beside me leaned to his companion.

"Jeez," he muttered, "I shouldn't have ordered that steak rare!"

But horror alone no longer packs theatres. Laid on for its own sake, gore-and-guts becomes boring. Audiences are hardened to it. Eventually, it crowds melodrama into the realm of snicker-provoking farce.

The fact that Jaws escapes this fate suggests that the film has much more than horror going for it.

As a tale-spinner by trade, I found the why of the film's phenomenal success almost as engrossing as its scenes. What are the ingredients that turn an uncomplicated, undersexed adventure story into a spectacular film success?

First, there's the basic situation. A clever writer can work wonders with a shaky story situation, but the end result is rarely memorable.

In the case of Jaws, the auctorial impulse visited the author with what every writer hopes for. This is an idea from which he can evolve a plot sturdy enough to go the course without lag, sag, or the wheels-in-air landing that occurs when a story runs out of fuel prematurely.

A redhot idea framed into a strong plot fleshed out with competent characters makes for a highly-readable piece of fiction. For film purposes, however, those elements aren't sufficient. Witness the fate of many a good story that has curled up and died during the transfer from printed page to screen.

The catalyst is the director. And the directing that went into Jaws is most devilishly effective.

The electronic shark is a triumph of ingenuity, but Disney Studios have achieved monsters no less convincing.

The situation — man against man-eater — is old as the craft of story-telling. We've been exposed to it any number of times. There were the demoniac lions of Tsavo, predators that brought construction to a halt on an African railway line, and Jim Corbett's tigers with their fantastic tally of natives paunched.

Suspense is melodrama's handmaiden. Movie-goers are hardened to it. To stiffen us in our seats and curl our toes, something special in way of suspense is required.

The director's gimmick in this picture is to pull the trigger on each charge of suspense either before the viewer is quite braced for the explosion, or at the precise point when his expectations have relaxed.

Jaws isn't a great picture. But as a spine-tingler, its impact was sufficient to give me that attack of the nervous sillies a couple of evenings later in the shallows of our home bay.

Man-eaters in B.C. coast waters? Nonsense! It couldn't happen here. I said as much to a federal fisheries man, who considered for a moment with an odd little smile. Then he told me about two hams that spoiled in storage during a fisheries research cruise in Queen Charlotte Islands waters.

He carried the hams aft. He dropped one of them overside. It vanished in a surge and an enormous swirl. Then he dropped the other ham. It too disappeared into a maw that would encompass a barrel.

The fisheries man didn't know what the ham-snatcher was, though he did recall that a shark of the horrific breed which figures in Jaws was caught several years earlier near Rose Spit.

On one point, he entertained few doubts. If he'd chosen that moment to tumble overboard, he would probably have joined those hams.

Installation Among Top Aluminum Siding Problems

By LYNNE GORDON

It is about this time of the year when you will be bombarded with ads, flyers, commercials or door-to-door salesman, all touting the virtues of aluminum siding.

There is no doubt that aluminum siding can be the answer to a lot of problems. Consumers are turning to siding in many cases for renovations, especially in an effort to upgrade old or rundown homes.

Siding made from wood or wood products suffers from rot, warp or shrinkage. The results are popping nails and cracked, split or loose boards. In spite of this, some consumers still prefer the natural beauty of wood and are willing to put in the time and money to keep it in top condition.

But if you hate the annual painting job, that may be one good reason to switch to aluminum siding. But remember, it's an expensive project.

And don't believe the ads that assure you aluminum siding is completely carefree. It must be washed once or twice a year — NOT just hosed down.

Beware of the extravagant claims that aluminum siding will save you substantially on heating costs. If a house is poorly constructed, adding the skin or siding will prevent heat loss and save fuel, but well-built homes, the savings is marginal, something like 2-5 per cent.

INSTALLATION

One of the biggest problems is getting aluminum siding installed properly, at a fair price. That's where the majority of complaints come from.

A sloppy workman uses careless measurements leaving areas that need to be filled up with lots of caulking compound. He'll use materials that he claims are up to standard for your home but there aren't any standards set for renovations.

The Central Mortgage and Housing corporation requires 25 thousands of an inch for new construction but 19 is frequently used for renovations. Some unethical salesmen or installers may even try to slip you seconds and charge you for a first-quality product. An Alcan spokesman says to counteract these problems they make only first-quality and only one gauge — 25 thousands of an inch.

A careless workman may also cover up vital vents. Be sure that vents in the gable ends are left esposed or have a panel installed that has vent holes in it. This is important so that moisture can escape and air can be circulated in the spaces between the ceiling and roof.

If the existing wood is healthy and the wall straight the siding can be nailed on directly. Otherwise, apply wood strapping to the surface to be covered and then install the siding.

An unethical salesman may also throw around the names of top aluminum siding manufacturers but that doesn't mean he will actually use that siding on your home. The impression he wants to leave is that he is working for a brand name product and working for a respectable dealer. You should check to see if the manufacturer's name is stamped on the siding before it's applied.

SAFEGUARDS

The three top aluminum manufacturers, Alcan, Reynolds and Kaiser, have all agreed to co-operate with the Consumer Protection Bureau by insisting that their independent dealers are all registered and bonded with this agency. This means the dealer is responsible for his salesmen's promises and can be held liable. It has meant an upgrading in the type of sales force hired and a closer check on high-pressure methods.

The safest thing to do is ask the salesman for his credentials and check him out immediately with the dealer. You can also check with the manufacturer to make sure the dealer is entitled to the dealership he claims to have.

Remember, you do have a choice between aluminum steel and vinyl siding. Check all companies to make sure you get the siding that does the best job for you.

No matter who you deal with, make sure you get it all in writing. Make sure the brand, gauge and cost of materials are clearly specified. If you are financing the project, get the complete cost, including interest and added service charges. Get a starting and completion date. Never sign two contracts. One case before the court right now has an elderly couple who signed one contract for windows and doors. Later when they decided to have the entire house done, they unwittingly signed another contract which included some of the work already completed under the first contract. The salesman tried to collect twice on the basis of the two contracts.

GUARANTEES AND WARRANTIES

This has been a very confusing and misleading area. Make sure you understand who is backing the guarantee or warranty. Do you have one from the dealer AND the manufacturer. Does the contract cover labor or material or both. Don't assume labor is covered unless it is clearly stated. A 20-year guarantee is usually pro-rated, which means the equity declines over the years.

Prices have gone up, but overcharging can be a major concern, so always get at least three estimates.

Make sure that you will get service when needed.

In some areas that are heavily polluted, siding will pit. Ask if your warranty covers this problem and whether the manufacturer will replace the siding unconditionally.

COOLING-OFF PERIOD

If you have been pressured into signing a contract, you have a cooling-off period. In Ontario you can break the contract, FOR ANY REASON, by sending a registered letter to the company within two clear working days. in other provinces the cooling-off period can be anywhere from two to 10 says.

The best thing to do before you sign is keep a cool head and check the reputation of the installer with the Consumer Protection Bureau, your local Better Business Bureau and the municipal licensing agency.

AFTERNOON AND EVENING CLASSES IN INTERIOR DECORATING

Joseph Egoyan

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held above the store and also supplemented by on location studies, in selected homes, including a visit at the residence of Mr. Egoyan to discuss the problems arising in furniture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, style theme, drapery and carpet selection, and proper use of pictures and accessories.

Mr. Joseph Egoyan, B.A., Ed., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and the California College of Arts and Crafts; has taught at Oakland Tech High, Calif.; the American College in Cairo, and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition, he has a wealth of practical experiences in retail field as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years, and Ego Interiors in Victoria for thirteen years. ## Four Fingers Of Daylight

Evening's coming on and you're still a long way from camp. Will you make it in before dark? Maybe, maybe not . . . but here's how to accurately estimate the time till sundown:

Face the setting sun with arms extended and measure the distance between Ole Sol's base and the horizon in fingers (no thumbs). Each finger counts as fifteen minutes. Four of them, then, equal one hour . . . four on one hand and two on the other add up to an hour and a half . . . and so on.

If the space to be measured is greater than all eight fingers, hold a stick at arm's length with its base on the horizon and mark the position of the sun's bottom edge with your fingernail. The number of fingers it takes to fill the distance is your time.

In deep woods or hilly country where it's difficult to judge the horizon, work from an imaginary line at eye level.

Consumer Protector Policy Taking Buyer Beware Tack

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal role as consumer protector adopted in 1968 now is in the process of being shifted to the more neutral philosophy of "buyer beware."

John Read of the federal consumers services branch describes as in the thinking stage the format of an expanded consumer information program aimed mainly at lower-income groups.

That means a switch in Box 99, the department's complaint and inquiry service.

The Box 99 service was started in 1968 by the consumer affairs department as a storefront operation designed to protect the consumer, especially the poor and the elderly, against unfair trade practices.

Although offices were initially designed as walk-in aid centres, Box 99 headquarters is located on the 17th floor of a federal building in Hull, Que., across the Ottawa River from the capital. Regional offices are operated in major Canadian cities.

Despite the department's perceived need and the intent of the program, a recent trans-Canada study conducted for the department showed that only about 16 per cent of the population had any knowledge of the service.

A one-shot advertising campaign geared strictly to the Box 99 service was conducted in 1969, but a consumer affairs spokesman said that since then the consumer has not been provided with any information on a national basis.

She said the department is trying to decentralize its operations and that Box 99 is but a single feature of several integrated services.

Yet, the publicized aim of the consumer protection branch in 1968 was to assist the poor, the elderly and similar groups to gain redress for injustices in the marketplace. Perhaps because of its lack of advertising, Box 99, since its inception seven years ago, has received only 118,680 consumer complaints and 39,710 inquiries from a population of more than 22 million.

Last year, 29,225 complaints were received compared with 3,109 in the first year of the operation.

When a complaint is received by Box 99 officials they can only make representations to the company, firm or person named. They have no official authority to take action against an offender.

The service can, however, take the matter to the federal or provincial government department under whose jurisdiction the complaint falls.

If, for example, a consumer complains to Box 99 about a faulty braking system on a new car and investigation shows the company to be at fault, a course of action would be recommended by Box 99 officials.

If the company refused to acknowledge the situation the inquiry might, in this case, be placed in the hands of the transport department for an official investigation that might result in legal action against the offending company.

PRETTY WACs GET TOP JOBS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Enlisted women in the U.S. army have been selected for top staff jobs in Washington partially on how pretty they are.

A committee of generals who reported on the army's equal opportunity efforts recommended an end to the policy, which it said meant "looks, figure and personality are considered when female personnel are nominated for assignment to high level staff."

"The practice violates . . . policy and discriminates against the individual who is not as physically attractive as others. Physical attributes are less important than . . . proficiency," the report said.

"The assumed object of presenting a good appearance may be served, but it has an adverse effect on the morale of that majority who are not so physically attractive."

At the same time, the study recommended continuing the unwritten policy of selecting recruiters and drill sergeants who "have no obvious distracting disfigurations" because they must project "a superior image of the army."

16 Women Succeed At Management

CUGGIONO, Italy (AP) — Sixteen women have made a small factory near Milan into Italy's most successful experiment in worker management.

The staff of the Work and Freedon bath mat factory say their only aim is to make enough money to live on and that neither politics nor ideology is a factor.

In its days of peak production, the factory, known then as Velco, had 50 workers and turned out about 500 bath mats a day.

By last February, the work force was down to 32 and the company announced it was going to fire more because of the recession. The 32 women occupied the plant.

By April, half the women had left, fearing legal troubles. But the remaining 16 turned out 150 mats a day using material already in stock.

With the profits from their first sales, the 16 ordered new material. They also enlisted the aid of a nearby maintenance firm to keep their machines running smoothly.

"And now, a bank has offered us a multi-million-lire loan," one of the women said. "We have rejected the offer for the moment, though, as we can still get by on our own."

"We could take more now as sales last month were extremely good, but we prefer to build up some reserves which could come in handy in harder months," said Anna Morgante.

The women are awaiting a court decision on their takeover later this month. They say they are willing to hand the factory over to its owners if full employment is guaranteed.

"We are not afraid," said Miss Morgante. "We have proved the firm can be competitive, especially with modernization of the plant, and we do not rule out handing it back.

"But the workers must not pay for the owners' mistakes."

Movies

South Pacific (xxx), on 2 at 1 and 6 at 2. A colorful and entertaining 1958 movie version of the Rodgers and Hammerstein hit Broadway musical classic, starring Mitzi Gaynor and Rossano Brazzi.

Out West with the Hardys (xx), on 4 at 2. Mickey Rooney and Lewis Stone star in this 1938 homespun comedy, about the Hardy family on a cattle-ranch vacation.

Just Around the Corner (xx), on 11 at 2. A 1938 Shirley Temple comedy-drama starring the Moppet as a youngster who is forced to leave boarding school when her father loses his fortune.

The Eyes of Charles Sand (xx), on 5 at 2:30. A 1972 made-for-TV supernatural thriller about a man who inherits the gift of visionary sight, starring Peter Haskell, Barbara Rush and Bradford Dillman.

Come Spy With Me, on 7 at 6:30. No rating available on this 1967 European-made espionage adventure, starring Troy Donahue and Andrea Dromm.

GINA LOLLOBRIGIDA
. . . on 5 at 9 p.m.

Irma La Douce (xxx), on 4 at 9. Billy Wilder directed this entertaining 1963 comedy, about a warm-hearted Parisian streetwalker who forms an unusual alliance with a naive policeman. Shirley Maclain's performance as the sweet tart named Irma is delightful, and Jack Lemmon's energetic portrayal is perfect.

Solomon and Sheba (xx), on 5 at 9. A lavish 1952 Hollywood version of the Biblical romance between the Israelite king, and the seductive queen sent from Egypt to destroy him. A weak script hampers a good cast which includes Yul Brynner, Gina Lollobrigida, George Saunders, Marisa Pavan and David Farrar.

Key West (xx), on 8 at 9. Stephen Boyd, Woody Strode, Tiffany Bolling and Sheree North star in this predictable 1973 made-for-TV detective yarn about an ex-CIA agent in Florida who becomes the victim of a revenge-seeking tycoon.

Night After Night (xxx), on 11 at 11. Nostalgia fans will enjoy this 1932 comedy-drama about a speak-easy owner who falls for a "nice" girl and tries to acquire "class." Film buffs take note as this features the movie debut of Mae West in a supporting role. George Raft and Constance Cummings star.

Key West (xx), on 6 at 11:15. (See earlier this evening for details.)

A Fine Madness (xxx), on 5 at 11:45. An inventive, screwball 1966 comedy featuring a fine performance by Sean Connery as an outspoken, radical poet who gets caught up in his own momentum, and an equally competent one by Joanne Woodward as his

EX-NFL STAR HIRED BY CBS

Paul Hornung, one of football's greatest and most colorful players, who retired following the 1966 season to pursue a broadcast and business career, has been signed to a multi-year contract as a football analyst for CBS Television Network Sports.

Hornung will work on National Football League game broadcasts on the CBS Television Network, starting this fall.

Following a great career at Notre Dame that saw him win All-American honors in 1955 and 1956 and being named Heisman Trophy Winner in his senior year, he was the bonus choice of the Green Bay Packers.

He played with the Packers from 1957 through 1966 and retired following the Packers' victory in Super Bowl I. He made All-Pro three times, 1959, '60 and '61; led the league in scoring three times; and still holds the league record for the most points in a season, 176 in 1960, and the most points in a championship game, 19 in 1961. He was the league's most valuable player in 1960 and '61.

A native of Louisville, Ky., where he still lives, Hornung was an All-State Football and basketball player at Flagnet High School.

His broadcast experience includes color commentary for the Minnesota Vikings games and Notre Dame games for six years on radio. He did sports for WBBM-TV in Chicago in 1970 and '71, and for the past two years he has been host of Paul Hornung's Greatest Sports Legends, a syndicated television series.

Retired Golfer Calls the Shots

Bob Moir, executive producer of next year's CBC-TV Olympic coverage, is producer of this year's Canadian Open Golf Tournament coverage and will field a strong team of commentators for the event.

When the Open telecasts begin on Thursday, July 24 (with reports Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, and live afternoon coverage Saturday and Sunday) Moir's crew will include Ernie Afaganis, Don Wittman, Steve Armitage, Don Chevrier and Bob McDevitt. But, the man who will attract much of the fans' attention is long-time professional, and now Canadian Golf Hall of Fame member, Stan Leonard.

As an expert analyst and color commentator, Stan has no peer in this country. His association with the Open goes back 33 years, to the 1912 tournament at Mississauga. That year the pros gathered together to split a total prize pot of only $5,000. This year's winner will collect eight times that amount, from a total purse of $200,000.

Leonard was low Canadian in the Open on nine different occasions, but failed to win the big prize (as a matter of fact; no Canadian has won the Open since Pat Fletcher, now Club professional at Royal Montreal, turned the trick in 1954).

Stan made his best run at the money in 1946, when he came to the 16th hole at Montreal's Beaconsfield Club leading the field. Unfortunately, his tee shot nestled in against the side of an old stone barn. By the time he chipped back to the fairway, it had cost him a bogey, and probably a chance to go into a playoff with George Fazio and Dick Metz, who tied for the lead.

Stan Leonard played the Royal Montreal course when the Canadian Open was held there in 1950. However, that was at the old Dixie course, prior to the Club's move to the present location on Ile Bizard. That year, he led the Open for the first two days, but finally succumbed to the pressure and wound up in fourth place.

The Canadian Open has seen most of the world's great golfers over the years. The list of winners reads like a who's who of the sport. And, Stan Leonard has played with most of them — from Ben Hogan to Gary Player, and most of the greats in between.

The point is, even without a win, there is probably no golfer anywhere who is better equipped to analyse the play and the players in the Canadian Open, than Stan Leonard. His knowledge of the game, the problems and the pressures of the Open is second to none.

PBS Encores Acclaimed Leonardo da Vinci Series

Leonardo da Vinci (1452-1519)

A talent so immense as to have left behind not only the Mona Lisa and The Last Supper, but also the plans for the airplane, the tank, the clock, the bicycle, the parachute, the two level bridge, the jack and the hydraulic screw is the subject of The Life of Leonardo da Vinci, returning to Channel 9 Sundays at 9:30 p.m. beginning July 20.

This five part series traces Leonardo the man, from his illegitimate birth in 1452 ,to his death 67 years later. Leonardo's career is seen to be a series of contrasts and contradicions. A most enigmatic and lonely figure, he invented the bicycle and was experimenting with flying machines five centuries before the invention of the automobile. In an age plagued by medieval superstition, he was enlightened, knowledgeable about physics, engineering and medicine.

Because he was "before" or "beyond" his time, Leonardo was alone. Although the medieval philosophical view of the world as a reflection of the divine hierarchical order had been disputed, the Enlightenment had not yet come. No man, including Leonardo, could bridge the gap. His discoveries could not be digested, and he could not be understood. Although he formed warm friendships that are seen in this series, he was essentially a "loner." He preferred the backwater of Milan to the competition of Florence. He preferred to work at his own speed, on projects that sometimes excited him more than his necessary patrons.

Each program in the Life of Leonardo da Vinci series is preceded by, The Age of Leonardi, a segment designed to give American viewers a sense of the Italian renaissance and Leonardo's place in it. Ben Gazzara, who comes from strictly Sicilian parentage, is the host and narrator. "I'm no expert on Leonardo," he explains. "My qualifications are more personal than that. I'm a man of Italian heritage, a distant countryman, with an interest in the world he came from."

The Life of Leonardo da Vinci stars Philippe Leroy as the adult da Vinci. Over 100 sets were designed especially for the series, which took two years to produce. Its production values resulted in numerous awards in Europe, including the Grand Prize in the 12th Monte Carlo International Film Festival.

FOLLOW THE LEADER — as Barney the elephant crosses a shaky log to join his fishing pal Willie, in this scene from the Disney World movie, Runaway on Rogue River, to be shown on Sunday at 6 p.m. on Channel 2 and 7:30 on 5.

Ratings Push Filler Series Into Top Late-Night Spot

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

NBC didn't really intend to hide its finest news program. It just scheduled Weekend on "an irregular basis," meaning it might turn up on nearly any Saturday night or Sunday night, filling a late spot left open in the re-runs of Johnny Carson's Tonight show.

Weekend, which can be called cheeky or impudent or cynical (depending on whether it amuses you or wounds you), started its irregular, some-time-during-the-month run in the middle of October, 1974. Its ratings for the time period and competition were good.

A. C. Nielson Co. estimated that it attracted 5.5 per cent of the nation's homes or, by the second standard, that 24 per cent of those looking at TV while Weekend was on the air chose to watch Weekend.

The ratings got better steadily. The weekend of June 7 and 8, found Weekend peaking at a rating of 8.3 per cent (or 5.7 million households) and a share of 32 per cent of those watching TV while it was on the air.

Even before Weekend hit that peak, it had won the permanent home it deserved. In March Richard C. Wald, presthat beginning in October Weekend would be "irreguident of NBC News announced lar" no more. Its home will be the first Saturday night of each month.

"The success of Weekend," Wald said, "has exceeded our most ambitious expectations." He added: "Our research shows that 62 per cent of the adult viewers of Weekend are between the ages of 18 and 49—a fairly young audience—which the program was designed to reach."

The success with the young audience is a curiosity, since executive producer Reuven Frank has created television's first adult news program. Quite deliberately, it is designed to be watched; it is not a radio program with incidental pictures that can be followed only by ear.

If you listen and don't watch, you miss the comments that flash upon the screen, such as "Subsidies can save free enterprise" or "Why did the Love Generation hate everybody?" or "If drinking water causes cancer, what's the use?" or "I don't know art; but I know what matches the drapes."

Those little comments, epigrams and stings are called "verbals" by Frank and anchorman Lloyd Dobyns and "about 80 per cent" of them are written by Frank, with the other 20 per cent coming from Dobyns. The rest of the writing of the 90-minute show, Dobyns says, reverses those statistics.

NBC wanted Tom Snyder to anchor Weekend, but Franks, who was president of NBC News from June 13, 1968 to Jan. 10, 1973, held out for Dobyns. Frank had been impressed with Dobyns coverage of the Paris peace talks on Vietnam. "Once or twice a day for four months, October to January, I had to find some different way to say the same thing: 'I don't know what's happening'," Dobyns said.

Dobyns is usually faithful to the requisite form of a television newsman. He begins with a properly somber expression, as though he were about to deliver the news that the end of the universe had come and gone. But there's a twitch of humor at the corners of the mouth and a glint in the eyes. The universe will survive, but meantime you may benefit from what you are about to be told.—(WP)

TOP MOVIES SOLD TO TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Paramount Pictures said it has agreed to sell the television rights for 42 of its movies, including Chinatown, The Great Gatsby and a nine-hour combined version of Godfather Parts I and II, for about $76 million.

Paramount, a subsidiary of Gulf Western Industries Inc., said it will receive about $15 million from RCA Corp.'s NBC network for The Godfather and Godfather Part II. ABC and CBS will pay Paramount about $61 million for 40 other movies, Paramount said. The final details of the agreements are still being worked out, the movie studio added.

Other movies include Serpico, Death Wish, Paper Moon, Catch 22, Lady Sings and the Blues and Save the Tiger.

SOAP STAR

He'd Rather Switch Than Fight

By TOM DONNELLY

WASHINGTON (WP) — A lot of favorite soap opera characters have been knocked off, written out or dropped without explanation this season, but undoubtedly the development that caused the biggest flap in daytime drama circles was the firing of George Reinholt from Another World. Dump the man who played Steven Frame for eight years, the man acknowledged as one of the top daytime drama idols?

Reinholt's multitude of fans barely had time to register their incredulity and indignation when ABC announced that he had been signed for One Life to Live, which airs opposite, of all shows, Another World.

Will Steven Frame's fans switch to One Life to Live? Reinholt curls his lip at that question. He says the viewers know perfectly well where Steve Frame leaves off and George Reinholt begins. Soap opera fans know what's what.

"That's why I thought it was so offensive on Another World when the script called for Pat to have children," Reinholt said. "I mean, some time before that she had a hysterectomy.

So there she was, having twins yet. I said to them, "You think the viewers won't notice the impossibility there? You think they won't remember all that fuss about her hysterectomy?"

In Singin' In the Rain, Gene Kelly says his motto is "Dignity — always dignity." Reinholt's is "Accuracy — always accuracy." That's why he was fired from Another World: for complaining about the quality of the scripts, especially about what he saw as their "inaccuracy." Reinholt says when "you cause a character to have a mental breakdown — to be psychotic and catatonic —and then have her turn up perfectly well a couple of weeks later, as if she'd gone somewhere and taken a sanity pill, well, I call that inaccurate."

Reinholt says when Steven Frame was in jail once (for bribing a witness in a complicated court case), stock in Frame's construction company was transferred to someone "whose identity could not be learned." Reinholt told the producers of Another World he tought that situation was highly improbable; they replied, "Oh, women don't care about details like that."

Reinholt recalled the exchange with scorn: "Women own over 80 per cent of the wealth, but they don't care about things like that!" As for nervous breakdowns: if the writers feel women don't really like to look at them in the middle of their housework, then they should exclude them from their scripts instead of having "inaccurate" mini-breakdowns.

Reinholt said as much on a radio talk show and got a phone call from a woman with one of the most distinctive voices in show business.

"I am an Oscah winnah," the woman said. "And I want you to know I agree with you completely." Reinholt recalled, "I said excitedly, 'It's Bette Davis!" and the voice said, 'Ne-vah ... mind!'" The caller went on to elaborate her thoughts in inimitable clipped accents. "I'd always heard Davis is a soap opera fan," said Reinholt, "and with that call I knew it for sure."

Another World was the first soap opera to expand to regular hour-long episodes. "They claimed with an hour to play around in, the show would rise to a more profound level but it got worse," Reinholt said. "In one script, two characters spent six pages comparing furniture. Now I ask you! What we actors see on the printed page is 10 times worse than what you see on the screen. We knock ourselves out trying to make the material more human."

Reinholt says he thinks Harding Lemay, who writes Another World, took a dislike to the Steven Frame character because he hadn't created it: "I'd always played him as a city boy because that was established by Agnew Nixon, who created the show. Lemay made him a rural type with a big farm family background. In daytime drama, new writers often don't look too kindly on the past successes of other writers. They want to make things over in their own images."

(Reached by phone, Harding Lemay said it's nonsense to say he's allergic to characters created by other writers. Some of his favorites were created by other writers. Some of his favorites were created by others, most notably Steven Frame. "I find him fascinating," said Lemay. "When I took over I was told there was no specific background for Steven so I proceeded to give him one that would add dimension to the story.")

And then there were those complaints Reinholt kept making, such as his charge that a "craniotomy" was a perfectly ridiculous operation for a hero to have. Just the same, says Reinholt, he was shocked to get a letter from executive producer Paul Rauch announcing that the actor's attitude had become untenable and his behavior "more of a problem that the show can continue to sustain." After eight years, and because he wanted to make the show more lifelike!

But Reinholt says he is happy to be with One Life to Live, even if he is getting less money. "It has intelligent dialogue," he said, "and real people in comparatively real situation. I think soap opera is a pop art form, sort of like comic strips wired for sound. Talking comic strips. I think they're as valid as the ones in the paper, but to extend them to an hour's length is really pushing it. Could you look at six pages of comic strips? Gee, I don't know. I guess you could."

And how was the departure of Steven Frame from Another World explained? "They produced a younger brother to 'inherit the Frame empire'," Reinholt said. "And I guess they hope he'll fill the rest of the bill — with Alice (Frame's wife). They sent Steve off to Australia to build a great marble city. That's about how the dialogue went. 'Where are you going?' 'Australia.' 'What are you going to do there?' 'I'm going to build a city'."

Talking comic strips! Reinholt really has something there.

Movies

Run Wild, Run Free (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. The beautiful Dartmoor country of England forms the background for this 1969 psychological drama about a mute child and his love for a wild pony, starring Mark Lester and John Mills.

Dingaka (xx), on 11 at 1. An offbeat but interesting 1965 drama, filmed in Africa, about an attornew who takes the case of a tribesman charged with murdering a rival he believed killed his daughter. Stanley Baker and Juliet Prowse star.

Tea For Two (xx), on 5 at 3:30. The 1920s play No, No Nanette served as the basis for this pleasant 1950 musical-comedy, starring Doris Day, Gordon MacRae and Eve Arden.

Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea (xxx), on 12 at 7. Excellent trick photography and special effects enhance this 1961 science-fiction tale about an atomic submarine trying to halt a radiation belt threatening the earth. A better-than-average cast includes Walter Pidgeon, Joan Fontaine and Peter Lorre.

BARBARA FELDON
. . . on 4 at 8:30 p.m.

Let's Switch (xx), on 4 at 8:30. Barbara Feldon, Barbara Eden and Richard Schaal star in this made-for-television comedy about the chaos that occurs when a woman's magazine editor trades roles with her former college chum, a suburban housewife.

The Last Survivors, on 5 at 8:30. No rating available on this 1975 made-for-TV drama, based on a true story, starring Martin Sheen as the highest-ranking officer to survive the sinking of his ship in a typhoon, faced with life and death decisions in an overloaded lifeboat.

Ocean's 11 (xx), on 11 at 9. Members of the so-called Sinatra "Clan" (Dean Mrtin, Sammy Davis Jr., Peter Lawford, Joey Bishop and Sinatra himself) star in this uneven 1960 comedy-crime-drama about a group of old war buddies who decide to pull a daring Las Vegas robbery.

Murder in the First Person Singular, on 4 at 11:30. A made-for-TV mystery movie starring William Windom as a terminally ill teacher trying to capitalize on the double-indemnity clause in his life insurance policy by blackmailing a student into murdering him.

The Reckoning (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. London and Liverpool form the backdrop for this perceptive 1969 portrait of a ruthless businessman who has made a success in southern England but is forced to return to his home in the North to visit his dying father. Nicol Williamson and Rachel Roberts head a fine cast.

Edge of Fear (x), on 2 at midnight. Routine 1963 Spanish-made mystery about a nightclub dancer who witnesses a murder, and becomes the target for his next crime.

Lady from Louisiana (xx), on 6 at midnight. A 1941 costume drama, set in old New Orleans, about a determined lawyer trying to rid the city of crime, starring John Wayne and Ona Munson.

Fraulein (x), on 7 at midnight. A poorly made 1958 drama which traces a young German girl's hard times during the last days of the Second World War. Dana Wynter appears perfectly groomed, despite many harrowing adventures, and Mel Ferrer is customarily tall, thin and tedious.

Get Christie Love! (xx), on 8 at midnight. Teresa Graves stars in this 1974 crime-drama which served as the pilot for her short-lived television series of the same name.

Sand (xx), on 8 at 1:30. The Will James novel about the trials and tribulations of a show horse served as the basis for this 1949 drama, starring Mark Stevens, Coleen Gray and Rory Calhoun.

This Savage Land (xx), on 7 at 1:50. Standard 1968 western about the hardships faced by homesteaders in the frontier West, starring Barry Sullivan, George C. Scott and Kathryn Hays.

Still the Top—Carson Is His Own Best Guest

By WALLACE MARKFIELD

(NYT) — Like Job, Johnny Carson and Mike Douglas and Merv Griffin nearly always sit still and ask overwhelming questions. "You're supposed to be a toenail biter. Are you a toenail biter?" "What do you think about when you're on the potty?" "Would you rather have a guy look up or look down your dress?" "Do you have strong feelings about God?"

However inspired or insipid the answer, they maintain the slightly melancholy, worldly-wise manner of men whose ears are filled 90 minutes a day, five days a week, with the daffy clamor and din of our culture. If at this moment Ronald Reagan and Jerry Lewis sit alongside them trading one liners, tomorrow I. F. Stone and Charo may be mixed and matched with a husband-and-wife team of guitar-playing rabbis.

Just recently, for that matter, Jeanne Dixon prophesied either better times or an apocalypse; Jane Fonda carried bad news about the contradictions of capitalism; Senator Edward Kennedy disagreed with Jane Fonda, although both agreed on the need for disagreement; and Masters and Johnson insisted — as did Otto Preminger — that the orgasm is a nice way to relieve sexual tension.

With all that jabber and jargon by representatives from every state of nerves, every occupation and preoccupation, it is not surprising that talk shows have never been seriously treated by serious-minded critics. Yet they add up to something like an oral history of our times, not to overlook the fact that they are highly entertaining, guileless, lowbrow diversions that put us under no obligation to take the long view, the broad view, the balanced view.

The beginning of a serious look at the talk shows, it seems to me, is to acknowledge that Carson and Douglas and Griffin are each different from the others.

Watching Douglas and Griffin handle their guests, one begins to understand how much art or artifice of the highest order go into being and staying simply likable. Thus, even when dealing with such a talk-show workhorse as Dr. Joyce Brothers, Douglas is never less than absolutely attentive and consummately curious. "Do you feel," he wants to know — and know and know — "That Helen's (Helen Gurley Brown) attitudes, feelings about chikdren are held, shared by . . . oh, more women than we realize?"

In a soft, somewhat stricken voice, Dr. Brothers announces her suspicion that environment and heredity and culture combine to condition, condition and influence, influence and shape, shape and form a woman's attitudes, attitudes and feelings about children.

While she makes her case, Douglas's "Yes, Yes, oh-ho yes!" builds and builds in earnestness and passionate intensity. All at once, Dr. Brothers gives a squirty little smile, the smile of a Disney squirrel; the glimpse of her over-bite is more engaging and eloquent than anything she has said. A moment passes, then another, then she sings out, "One recent study shows that the maternal urge is . . . more, much more than we realize . . . that so-called urge . . ."

MIKE DOUGLAS

Dreambound

Douglas, ecstatic with affirmation, begins to nod; he is still nodding when Dr. Brothers goes straight to the heart of the matter: ". . . is what society, our social structure urges upon women."

And pretty soon the time is up. ("Hey — Douglas smacks his brows with one hand, blows kisses with the other — "We . . . are . . . out . . . of time." Yet no guest has failed to make and round off her pinpoint. "Will you come back . . . soon?" pleads Douglas.

Indeed they will, absolutely they will — and so, come to think of it, will most of us, for during those last few seconds, when the credits roll, when the camera pans around the theatre and picks out those shining dreambound faces, it's hard to fight down the feeling that we too are of some interest, we too may one day make a good showing with this sunny, sweet-tempered man.

Given the choice, though, we might be just a bit better off with Merv Griffin, who in sunniness and sweet-temper exceeds not only Douglas but Bambi. Besides, there's a suggestion around the edges of Griffin's round-eyed, honeyed gaze that he can use the business a lot more than Douglas, to say nothing of Carson, that he doesn't mind — not that much — if he's scheduled as the last stop on the talk-show shuttle.

JOHNNY CARSON

He's pleased, he's delighted — and the pleasure, the delight attends him like an aura for the full 90 minutes — that one of the stars of The Towering Inferno, of Earthquake, of A Woman Under the Influence has dropped in and, by crazy coincidence, brought along a clip from The Towering Inferno, from Earthquake, from A Woman Under the Influence.

But even if Carson showed the same clip weeks ago and Douglas only days ago, on Griffin's monitor the print seems fresher, the focus sharper—or else we're simply compelled to watch more intensely. And how could it be otherwise? Anything less would constitute a rejection of Griffin, who's about as easy to reject as a Chaplin waif, and he often appears to expect even rougher handling from the world.

We might wish, in fact, that he would be altogether convinced of his own unaffected grace and charm — at least that he would manage to say, "Listen, we really have a great show for you today" without a persistent quaver of apprehension.

Yet, in his own wistful, yearning, homier-than-thou way, Griffin goes quickly and deeply inside his guests. Like Jack Paar, he has the knack of wheddling out of them the subtlest tones and overtones, the single most significant gesture.

"Oh, I bet you had your share," he says to Totie Fields, implying trouble, hard work, bad luck and hurt. "Who counts?" she replies with a one-shouldered shrug, meaning trouble, hard work, bad luck and hurt and it is almost possible to forget that we've seen her at least once too often.

The stage is overlighted, overfurnished; the tempo is fast, fizzy, the atmosphere charged with anger. We sense, perhaps, that a little too much is at stake for those who sit alongside the lord of hosts. ("Oh, yes! Oh, yes! Oh, yes! John, you gave me my start, John!" cries Joan Rivers. "This show, your show meant muncho to me!" cries Freddie Prinz. "They knew me, but until I came on here they didn't know me!" cries Karen Valentine.)

One guest will praise Carson's tennis serve, another his card tricks, yet another begs for his Humphrey Bogart impression, and all assume postres of supplication till the obligatory plug. ("Hey, you're opening at Caesar's Palace . . . Hey, you'll be doing that new series . . Hey, you've got a special coming up . . Hey, you've got this pilot, this album, this movie, this spin-off . . ."

These plugs plainly bore Carson, and it shows, along with everything else, plainly on his face, which is like the face of a malevolent Stan Laurel. Without wasting a line or motion of it, he can articulate and make ultravisible incredible variations of mood. He has a dangerous deadpan, an evil double take and a pair of eyes as restless and uncongenial as a school of piranha; at their very kindest they register killing shrewdness.

Secure

Over these 13 years the choir boy smartaleck, the sweet-shoppie tease who used to stare fixedly at a starlet's cleavage and say, "You never get to see any more good double features," has grown colder-hearted, tougher-minded, more secure in his comic identity and just mean and fast and fiendishly funny enough to pass off genuine irony as tinny patter. In place of the merely brilliant emcee stands a sardonic ringmaster given to flicking his whip at the audience. ("They were the kind of people whom if you were mailing out you'd address to Occupant Only."

And nowadays Carson tends increasingly to take the hide off a guest. ("I love your hair-style, but I'm not so sure about your life-style." . . . "I think you have the real essentials to be a writer—a desk, a typewriter and plenty of paper")

In the long run, Carson is his own best guest. Slick and snappy as his show is, one week's, one month's, one year's assortment of personality-pushers fades into the next's, and the finest, funniest moments come when Carson is on camera. But when is he not? When, furthermore, does he fail to top a top banana? To exalt the dreariest dialogue? (Super-star guest: "Today's toys are shoddy and in many ways sexist; they fail to relate to the underlying emotional needs of young people or the child." Carson, using the voice of a demented nymphet: "Hi. I'm your Barbie doll. Come see my water bed. Come join my consciousness-raising group.")

Once he even upstaged a troupe of singing dogs by studying them with exquisitely silent sad courtesy; he seemed throughout to be considering the canine condition.

After all this time, Carson remains, at bottom, unknownable. But does it really matter? Which of us would think to ask what it is that Carson or Douglas or Griffin uphold, what is of consequence to them? Is there anything? Maybe, just maybe, we once in a while have an idea a notion that Johnny and Mike and Merv are more or less of the kind who surely, probably most likely would make a statement if the time ever came to make a statement — and that as such a time they would say to us, out of a higher wisdom:

. . . wistful

Fat and Funny Kid Earns His 'Overnight' Success

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

Chico and the Man arrived on television last September, one reviewer dismissed the show by writing: "It needs some funny scriptwriters." By the end of its first season, however, Chico and the Man had scored so high, so consistently, in the ratings that it didn't need a thing.

The series was firmly established among the most popular of all programs. Twice during the season it had been ranked No. 1 of all programs. It had been in second place four times, and it was third on six occasions. Its bottom position the whole season (and re-runs don't count) had been one slip into 11th place.

Further, when Chico and the Man was pre-empted for specials, the NBC network always lost ratings points.

By season's end everything that had been in competition with Chico and the Man had been cancelled.

The victims included Kolchak: The Night Stalker which would have been a winner against any weaker competition; Planet of the Apes, a successful costume movie series, which did miserably on TV; Khan, a bad idea that was poorly executed, proving only that Charlie Chan is best on the late show, and finally, Alan Alda's situation comedy, We'll Get By, which didn't get by the first 13 episodes.

One of the reasons for this success was the fortunate scheduling of Chico and the man as part of NBC's Friday-night schedule. NBC won the entire night, starting with Sanford and Son and continuing with Chico, the Rockford Files and Police Woman.

Even so, and with such spendid ratings, Chico and the Man had some troubles.

Freddie Prinze

Chico is described as an "outspoken young Chicano recently returned from Vietnam." Chicanos in Los Angeles, however, complained because actor Freddie Prinze has a Puerto Rican mother and a Hungarian father. He is not really a Chicano.

Nor did Chicanos care for garage operator Ed Brown (Jack Albertson) and his caustic comments about Mexican-Americans: "Everybody knows you people are lazy," and "leave and take your flies with you."

James Komack, who created the series, managed to stop the first complaint by hiring Isaac Ruiz (who is a Chicano) to play Mondo, the Butcher, as a regular in the series. The second complaint was silenced by giving Ed Brown a better understanding of Mexican-Americans, and this is a natural development, since stereotypes of any group usually disappear as one comes to know individuals.

Besides, Freddie Prinze proved immensely likable as Chico. He is, at the age of 21, still learning the trade that Jack Albertson, 65, has been practicing for over 40 years. Freddie grew up in Washington Heights, "a suburb of Harlem," and learned the comedian's trade by working — for free — in any club that would allow him to perform.

He never did complete the requirements for a diploma at New York's High School for the Performing Arts.

He was hanging around Budd Friedman's Improvisation Club in New York every night and waiting his turn with other aspiring comedians on the stage. Quite often Freddie didn't get on until 3 a.m., and this meant that he almost never got to school in time for a 9 a.m. course in economics. However, he said, "They have decided to send me my diploma."

Freddie says that he is a performer because of "an intense desire to be liked."

As a youth, he was "fat and bright. I played the piano, guitar and drums. There were guys who were funnier than me right in my neighborhood; but it was my defence mechanism, making them laugh."

Now that he's 6-foot-2 and 180 pounds, Freddie has little patience with old friends in Washington Heights who have turned to drugs or petty crime. "I tell them, 'Stop your baby-crying. You can get out. Anybody can choose their own destiny'."

Freddie Prinz may be in for a lesson or two about destiny when September arrives.

BOB HOPE AND JOAN FONTAINE star in the comedy, Casanova's Big Night, about a tailor's apprentice who gets into romantic trouble when he poses as the great lover, to be telecast on Wednesday at 1 p.m. on Channel 11.

Author's Favorite Play Re-Telecast

Eugene O'Neill's tumultous drama, A Touch of the Poet, is the Theatre in America performance, July 23 at 9:00 p.m. on KCTS — 9. Matinee performance July 26 at 1:30 p.m.) The third in an unfinished cycle of eleven O'Neill plays that were to record 175 years in the life of an American family, A Touch of the Poet was the only play with which O'Neill himself was satisfied

An evocative character study and family portrait, A Touch of the Poet speaks pessimistically about the impossibility of mutual understanding. Cornelius Melody (Fritz Weaver) is a braggart and tyrannical Irishman, who fancies himself superior to the merchant class Yankees around him. He blinds himself to the squalor of his present situation by dwelling on a past moment of glory when the Duke of Wellington personally commended him in battle. Everyone else — especially his daughter Sara (Roberta Maxwell) — sees him for the drunken, meddlesome, lazy fraud he has become.

Sara is in love with the son of a rich Yankee tradesman, who lies ill in a bedroom of her father's inn. Her father naturally considers the Yankee beneath them: he is astonished to discover that the Yankees have the same attitude towards him and his daughter. When Melody imagines that his honor has been insulted, he sets out to horsewhip the father of Sara's lover. Running head-on into the unromantic realities of Yankee tradition, he is beaten like a common brawler and arrested for disturbing the peace. The awesome destruction of Melody's pride is the drama's tragedy.

FRITZ WEAVER stars in Eugene O'Neill's, A Touch of the Poet, a play which reveals the author's own tormented background, and said to be his favorite work, will be telecast on Wednesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 9.

LYNN REDGRAVE

Down Home Country Host Has Grassroots Background

Country-folksinger and songwriter Tom Gallant, a 29-year-old performer who hails from New Brunswick, will get a lot of exposure this summer on the CBC-TV network.

His major show, which got underway July 11, is called Down Home Country—a series of eight hour-long variety programs scheduled Friday nights at 9.

Gallant stars as Down Home Country's personable singing host, a role which he considers his "biggest break" to date—from the days when he first began in the one-camera studio in his home-town of Campbelltown, N.B., as an ambitious 16-year-old.

But besides being a great opportunity for the cool, articulate Acadian, the mass-appeal, big-audience, progressive country music series is also a CBC vehicle for some of Canada's most gifted young country-folk artists, something which Gallant views with no small measure of nationalistic pride.

"It's just unbelievable, the talent in this country—as anyone who watches this show will find out."

The lineup of guest performers includes Winnipeg's Chad Allan, Calgary's "Diamond" Joe White, Ottawa's Colleen Peterson and Sneezy Waters, Montreal's Jesse Winchester, Cape Breton's John Edmunds, Maritimer Hal Marks, the former Country-time songbird from Northern Ontario, Myrna Lorrie, Toronto's Good Brothers . . . and the list continues, including such big-name American artists as Waylon Jennings, Kenny Rogers, and the hotters performer in today's U.S. country scene, Jessi Colter, who sang her big hit I'm Not Lisa on the opening program.

The resident singing talent on the series includes an all-female trio named Blue Jane—Stephanie Taylor, Diane Miller, Judi Richards—who together produce the sweetest sounds this side of Nashville. And there's also the comic threesome of Harvey Atkin (Chuck Wagon, the show's get-along-gourmet), Peter Cullen (Lake Warm, a lovable but lousy musician: "I'm good, but I ain't ready yet") and Nancy White, who is ready and proves it by performing both as a comedienne and clear-voiced soloist.

Gallant is confident that Down Home Country will be a success, mainly because he has a lot of confidence in his producer, Stan Jacobson. Jacobson used to produce The Johnny Cash Show, and before that was a CBC producer-director of Wayne and Shuster comedy specials.

In Gallant's previous experience, he has always produced his own ideas for shows. He writes his own songs, has recorded one album with another due for release this fall, has been the author of both radio and TV plays, has written CBC documentaries of good enough quality to be nominated for prizes, and has composed three film scores.

Behind the scenes, he has been active too, and gained a lot of technical know-how. Gallant has been a camera-man, audio and video switcher, lighting man, director and producer. And, he points out, has swept the studio floor.

He believes his best work is about the Maritimes. "I am a cultural nationalist—very strongly so." As an artist, he feels he can express himself most vividly when speaking from his home area to the people he understands.

In spite of all his TV experience, he says he was never in the business "for the buck." But he was pleasantly surprised when the CBC picked him as host of Down Home Country. The series will yield a pretty good buck, admits Gallant—also noting tongue-in-cheek that the experience has provided the material for a song he recently wrote.

The title? God Never Meant Man To Send Pictures Through The Air.

FRED ASTAIRE is the host of a special tribute to the musical motion pictures produced by 20th Century-Fox, to be telecast on Thursday at 11:30 p.m. on Channel 4. Clips from over 30 musicals will be shown, including the 1929 Sunnyside Up to Hello Dolly, filmed in 1969.

CTV SERIES FOCUSES ON HUMAN POTENTIAL

However human beings come together, they form a microcosm of society. In the future, when the world is a global village, candor, trust and brotherhood could become elemental. Examining the expanding humanism of our society, Towards Tomorrow investigates where we stand in relation to ourselves and those around us in The Human Potential Movement, airing Thursday, July 24, 9:30-10 p.m., on the CTV Television Network.

In 1960 there was one major experimental centre for the development of human potential. This was located at Big Sur, California. Here they experimented and researched the noblest, most fully human aspects of behavior — consciousness, self-actualization, and altruistic behavior. These aspects of humanity were applied on an individual basis and modified for social institutions and businesses. They searched for methods in which the individual could make a contribution to the whole of his society in a manner meaningful and fulfilling to him.

This was the start of the humanistic revolution and 12 years later there were over a thousand growth centres setting up a network of trainers who have fanned out across the world.

The insights acquired are being joined together in practice in ways which promise new levels of effectiveness. With the growth of this human potential movement, religion and liberal education in a manner that is changing our society by getting people in touch with each other and themselves.

Johnny Carson Show, on 5 at 11:30. Among Johnny's guests tonight are singer Helen Reddy, and muppet-puppeteer Jim Henson. (90 mins.)

Movies

The Three Worlds of Gulliver (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. Excellent special effects highlight this 1969 children's adventure fantasy, based on Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels.

Svengali (xxx), on 11 at 1. An excellent 1931 movie rendering of George du Maurier's classic melodrama about the sinister hypnotist and the artist's model he turns into a great singer, starring John Barrymore and Marian Marsh.

The Queen of Babylon (x), on 5 at 3:30. A terrible 1956 Italian-made spectacle, made even more ridiculous by ineptly dubbed English dialogue. If you care, it stars Rhonda Fleming as the slave-girl-turned-Queen, and Ricardo Montalban as the warrior who puts her on the throne.

Trapped Beneath the Sea, on 4 at 8. No rating available on this 1974 made-for-television drama about an attempt to rescue a crew of four trapped in a mini-submarine off the coast of Florida. Cast includes Lee J. Cobb and Martin Balsam.

NOEL COWARD
. . . on 12 at 9 p.m.

John O'Hara's Gibbsville (xxx), on 5 at 8. A repeat telecast of an acclaimed 1974 made-for-television movie, adapted from semi-autobiographical stories by John O'Hara. The drama takes its sub-title—The Turning Point of Jim Malloy—from its central character, a 1940s young man who comes home rebellious, after being expelled from Yale. He takes a job with the local paper, a post that was to be a turning point in his—and in O'Hara's own—career. Cast includes Jim Savage, Gig Young and Biff McGuire.

Fer-de-Lance, on 7 at 8. Another "submarine trapped on the ocean floor" made-for-TV drama, this one filmed in 1974 and starring David Janssen and Hope Lange. The twist in this one is a colony of poisonous snakes on the loose, terrorizing the trapped scientists.

The California Kid (xx), on 8 at 8:30. High speed car chases and squealing tires abound in this 1974 made-for-television movie starring Martin Sheen as a hot rodder who would like to turn the tables on a local sheriff who punishes speeders by running them off hairpin mountain curves.

Bunny Lake Is Missing (xxx), on 12 at 9. An intriguing and suspenseful 1965 mystery about a London policeman investigating the kidnapping of an American woman's small daughter. There are enough plot twists and a good cast (Laurence Olivier, Keir Dullea, Carol Lynley and Noel Coward) to keep you interested.

MARTIN SHEEN
. . . on 8 at 8:30 p.m.

Strike Force, on 5 at 9:30. No rating available on this 1975 made-for-TV crime-drama which brings a New York detective, a Federal agent and a state trooper together on a tough drug case. The cast in unfamiliar.

The Crime Club, on 7 at 9:30. Another 1975 made-for-television crime-drama, this one about a society of detectives, lawyers and writers formed to prevent and solve crimes. Their latest case involves an ice-pick murderer, and again, there are few familiar faces in the cast.

Judith (xx), on 12 at 11:15. A good cast (Peter Finch, Jack Hawkins and Sophia Loren) is wasted in this 1966 drama about members of an Israeli underground group who enlist the help of an Austrian Jewess to help track down her Nazi ex-husband. A poor script hampers all.

The Haunting of Rosalind, on 4 at 11:30. A made-for-TV mystery chiller about a ghost who terrorizes a wealthy family, starring Frank Converse and Pamela Payton-Wright.

The Last Child (xx), on 6 at midnight. A 1971 drama set in a futuristic society where the government controls how many children a couple may have, starring Van Heflin, Janet Margolin and Michael Cole.

House of Frankenstein, on 7 at midnight. A 1945 thriller which brings together the Wolf Man, Dracula and Frankenstein's monster, starring Lon Chaney, John Carradine and Glenn Strange. For horror fans only.

Winter Kill (xx), on 8 at midnight. A 1974 made-for-television mystery starring Andy Griffith as the sheriff of a ski resort terrorized by a murderer.

The Court Jester (xxx), on 2 at 12:05. Danny Kaye is excellent in this 1956 spoof of medieval England, about a circus clown who gets involved with outlaws. Glynis Johns and Basil Rathbone co-star.

Les Miserables (xxxx), on 6 at 1:30. Superb 1935 film version of Victor Hugo's classic epic about a reformed criminal relentlessly pursued by a vengeful police inspector, starring Fredric March, Charles Laughton and Sir Cedric Handwicke.

The Mad Room (xxx), on 8 at 2. A gruesome, but well-made 1969 horror drama about a companion to a wealthy widow who brings her brother and sister to live with her after they are released from an insane asylum. Adapted from the 1941 Ladies In Retirement, and starring Shelly Winters and Stella Stevens.

In the work of Levi-Strauss, all our themes — 'Mythology,' the understanding of human evolution as a transcendent force, the problem of belief — are drawn together.
